Super-Bomb Mentioned as 'Probability' By AEC Head

Pike, on Air, Gives Strongest Official Hint of Progress On New Weapon

By Coleman B. Jones
New York Herald Tribune News Service

The hydrogen bomb was mentioned as a "probability" by the acting chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission yesterday during a recorded broadcast in which he expressed regret that "world events have forced us into keeping more and more emphasis on weapons."

Sumner T. Pike, one of the two remaining original members of the AEC, spoke during the weekly radio report prepared for Chicago broadcast by Representatives Melvin Price, a member of the joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, and Barratt O'Hara, both Illinois Democrats.

His description of the H-bomb as a "probability"—a much stronger indication of progress than any other official has voiced since work on the super-weapon was ordered last month by President Truman—was made "as a citizen" in response to a question by Price.

Stresses Peace Works

Earlier, Pike had emphasized that "peaceful developments have not been neglected by AEC," citing the recent "most hopeful" results in diagnosis of "the reason for most heart troubles" and with machines promising production of "industrial power."

Of the latter, he said, "I think very possibly we can get atomic energy to power ships," but "never" to run automobiles or locomotives.

Discussing problems in medical and biological research, he pointed out that "only two weeks ago we found that the University of California in research had apparently diagnosed the reason for most heart ailments" with scientific tools made possible by the AEC program.

"In rabbits," he said, "this condition has not only been diagnosed but has been cured. It will take probably a good many years to find out whether the same thing can be done with human beings, but it's the most hopeful thing to my knowledge that's ever happened in the study of heart disease."

Price expressed his own view that "the hydrogen bomb portends disaster for the world unless the nations of the world find a positive way to live in peace," since "even if we win the race to produce the first H-bomb, it will be only a matter of time before Russia achieves success also."

"As a citizen," Pike said, "of course I feel that the existence of the H-bomb, or the probability of the H-bomb, makes it all the more necessary that we come to some

Son, 11, Carries On As 'Pop' Collapses, Dies at Newsstand

Chicago, Feb. 26 (AP).—On Sunday mornings, Richard Wolfe, jr., 11, has been helping his father operate a newsstand in front of St. Dorothy's Church.

Today, the boy's 45-year-old father collapsed at the stand. The man was carried into the church vestibule. A fire department rescue squad began resuscitation work and a priest gave the elder Wolfe last rites.

Richard went back to the newsstand and sold papers while he waited. Even after the Rev. Joseph E. Connelly told the boy his father was dead, Richard stayed on the job, tears welling from his eyes.

"We've had the stand two years," he said. "Pop wouldn't want me to leave it alone."

Sir Harry Lauder, Scottish Singing Comedian, Dies at 79

Mill Boy Who Became Leading Stage Figure Suffered Long Illness

Strathaven, Scotland, Feb. 26 (AP).—Sir Harry Lauder, 79, left tonight on his last farewell tour. The world-famed Scottish comedian died at his home after long months of illness.

Sir Harry started as a mill boy and became one of the best loved—and one of the richest—figures of the stage in the world. It was he who wrote "Roamin' in the Gloamin' " and made it almost a folksong in its popularity and familiarity.

Suffering from arterio-thrombosis (an arterial blood clot) complicated by kidney ailments, he was near death late in 1949 but rallied and for weeks appeared greatly improved.

Sir Harry, whose twinkling eyes and broad baritone first won him fame in 1900, was widely known in the United States, where he made some two dozen tours from coast to coast.

His last trip to the United States was in 1937, but he stoutly denied until early last year that he was thinking of retiring from the stage. Still hale and hearty, he skirted his kilts and waved his knobbly stick for soldier audiences in Britain during World War II.

Until last summer he was organizing local shows for charity in England and Scotland. He even talked of making another "farewell appearance" in America, but gave up the idea because of his failing health.

Born August 4, 1870, he was the oldest of seven children. He went

Dispersal of Big U. S. Cities Held a 'Must' in H-Bomb Race

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—An arms race for hydrogen bombs means 30 to 60 million Americans should be moved from big cities, at a cost of 15 to 25 billion dollars a year for 10 years, four atomic scientists said today.

They were talking of the effects and costs of moving people and industries from cities vulnerable to H-bomb attack.

"Cities are hardly defensible against bombs," Dr. Leo Szilard, University of Chicago biophysicist, declared in a University of Chicago roundtable discussion on the H-bomb.

"We cannot have advanced fighter bases to defend New York, or Baltimore, or Washington: If we go into this arms race at all, it will be lunacy not to take defense measures. In the case of these coastal cities, it means dispersal of the population."

But inland cities also could be hit.

Chicago and Detroit might be targets, said Dr. Harrison Brown, chemist of the University of Chicago.

"If we want to disperse all of our cities, we would probably have to spend something like 25 billion dollars a year, and in 10 years we could have very good dispersal," Dr. Szilard said.

"I would say that about 30 to 60 million people would have to move in a general dispersal."

Such an exodus from big cities would "cause an enormous economic upheaval in this country," Dr. Brown declared. He said Government would have to pay the expense.

This, they said, is what one H-bomb, if 1000 times more potent than an A-bomb, would do:

Destroy almost everything up to 10 miles away from the blast. "The biggest cities on earth would be destroyed by one bomb." The flash effect would extend out to 20 miles.

Other participants in the discussion were Dr. Hans Bethe, professor of physics at Cornell University and wartime director of theoretical physics at Los Alamos, and Dr. Frederick Seitz, research professor of physics at the University of Illinois and former director of the Oak Ridge Atomic Energy training program.

Rome Socialists Battle Fascist Song Chanters

Rome, Feb. 26. (AP)—Riot police broke up a battle between neo-Fascists and Socialists in the heart o. Rome today. Several of the rioters suffered bruises. Police arrested an undisclosed number of persons.

Reports from the scene said followers of the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI), chanting Fascist songs, bore down in a truck on a meeting of anti-Communist Socialist Unity (PSU) members. The PSU adherents, singing the "Workers Hymn," charged the truck.

Rift in Guard Laid to Lack of Understanding

Adjutants General Group Told AF Acts To Remove Causes

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Past differences between the National Guard and its air component were "due entirely to lack of understanding," Assistant Air Secretary Harold C. Stuart disclosed yesterday.

Stuart told the Adjutants General Association at the closing session of its conference at the Hotel Mayflower that the Air Force had taken steps to remove causes of controversy as they were recognized.

He said the State adjutants general were not always correctly informed of the Air Force's objectives in seeking arrangements that would insure adequate training of Air National Guard units and their most efficient integration into regular forces in case of emergency.

The association reelected its entire slate of officers, including Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison of Massachusetts, president; Maj. Gen. Leo M. Boyle of Illinois, vice president.

U. S. Is Snubbed Musically by Guatemala Band

Guatemala City, Feb. 26. (UP)—Guatemala last night offered a musical snub to the United States, and the official newspaper Diario de la Manana hinted today that it was a deliberate token of this country's "anticolonial" policy.

When a Puerto Rican color guard, carrying the Stars and Stripes, took its place for ceremonies opening the Central American "Olympic" games, a Guatemalan military band played "La Borinquena" — a dance tune — instead of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Puerto Rico is an unincorporated territory of the United States, which may eventually become a state. Communist charges that it is a U. S. colony have been denied by insular political leaders.

U. S. Ambassador Richard C. Patterson, jr., "surprised and indignant" at the slur, said he would protest formally to Guatemala's left-wing government.

Murder Not Ruled Out

Romanian DP Held in Probe Of U. S. Naval Attache's Death

Vienna, Austria, Feb. 26 (AP).—United States authorities held a Romanian displaced person today in connection with their investigation of the unexplained death of Captain Karpe, U. S. naval attache in Romania.

Karpe—a close friend of Robert Vogeler, recently sentenced to 15 years in prison in Hungary on charges of spying—fell or was pushed from the Paris-bound Arlberg express Thursday. His mangled body was found by a trackwalker in a tunnel south of Salzburg.

U. S. Army sources said the Romanian displaced person was not aboard the express when Captain Karpe met his death. The Romanian was picked up in Salzburg Thursday in a routine checkup because his past record included complicity in several train robberies.

He was about to be turned loose when an apparent weakness developed in his alibi.

The sources emphatically denied a report published here in the British-licensed Weltpresse that a Romanian and Bulgarian had been arrested in possession of the attache's briefcase.

Army officials said, possibility of murder has "definitely" not been ruled out.

Labor Party Fight Seen Over Policy

'Soft' or 'Militant' Leadership Issue Reported Behind Incipient Cleavage

London, Feb. 26 (AP).—Left-wingers in the British Labor Party were reported rallying today for an early trial of strength with the more moderate leaders of Prime Minister Attlee's government.

The nub of the incipient cleavage was this: Should Labor walk softly in the face of its hairbreadth escape from defeat in Thursday's election, or should it militantly carry on for more socialism?

Incidental in the embryo revolt is an election post-mortem to be held at a party caucus Wednesday, when the fur may fly over the way Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison and Foreign Secretary Bevin ran the campaign.

These two men are leaders of the moderate wing and they also are getting most of the blame for Labor's loss of 55 seats to the Conservatives.

With four districts yet to report—and these may not give any comfort—Labor had 315 seats in the House of Commons, the Conservatives and allies 294, Liberals 8, Independent Liberals 1, Irish Nationalists 2. The speaker, a Conservative elected as a nonpartisan, does not vote except in a tie.

Shoestring Majority

Though this gave Labor a shoestring majority of 10 over all other parties, in practice it is increased to 12 because the Irish Nationalists traditionally do not occupy their seats. This is their way of protesting against the separation of Ireland and Northern Ireland.

Newly elected MPs, who refuse to be identified, said the leftwingers who are rallying their forces are made up largely of long-time socialist intellectuals and some of the more militant trade unionists.

Their activities in the past have centered around the personality of Aneurin Bevan, fiery, eloquent former miner from the valleys of Wales, the minister of health who many times has been mentioned as a possible Labor prime minister.

Though a patched-up truce seemed likely to be maintained for the time, these leftists will have several opportunities in the next few days to press their views both inside and outside the cabinet.

One such occasion is the caucus Wednesday, just before the new Parliament meets to be sworn in and organized. On the agenda is the election of a party leader, who becomes prime minister. There have been no signs that Prime Minister Attlee will be challenged for the leadership.

Also on the agenda is the election of some other party officials, including a chairman and whips.

Charges May Fly

At the post-mortem, old charges are likely to be revived against Morrison. He is accused of insisting that the party water down its Socialism during the election campaign in a bid for the middle class vote. That was why Bevan and the almost equally outspoken War Minister Emmanuel Shinwell, two of Labor's star campaigners, were given no radio time.

He also is accused of dismissing the leftwingers' idea of launching a patriotic call to the nation to accept more Socialist austerity in

Lodge Battles With Taft on Vote Change

Senators Present Clashing Views on Plan in Letters to House Republicans

By The Associated Press

Senators Taft (R., Ohio) and Lodge (R., Mass.) battled openly yesterday over a proposal to change the method of electing Presidents.

Taft said that if a Senate-approved constitutional amendment that goes before the House Rules Committee today ever became law it would be "fatal to the hope of electing a Republican President if the election is in any way close."

Lodge replied tartly that he and other sponsors of the resolution were "not afraid of entrusting the Republican cause to the people."

Letters to House Members

The exchange of views between the two Republican Senators—both mentioned as possible candidates for their party's 1952 presidential nomination—came in letters mailed to all Republican members of the House.

Since the Senate passed the proposed constitutional amendment by a 64-to-27 vote on February 1, opposition to it has developed within both parties in the House. A two-thirds vote of both Houses is required before it can be submitted to State Legislatures.

Taft told his House GOP colleagues it would be a "vain hope" and a "desperate gamble" for the Republicans to depend on picking up enough votes in the South to overcome what they would lose in the North under the proposed change.

The Lodge bill would divide each State's electoral vote between presidential candidates on the basis of the popular vote they got. Now, the candidate with the most votes in any State gets all of that State's electoral votes.

Sees "Greatest Opportunity"

Lodge said this would give the Republican Party the greatest opportunity it has had since the Civil War to break into the South. He said Taft was proceeding on the assumption that the South's Democratic-voting habit couldn't be changed.

Taft argued that the election machinery in the South is all in the hands of Democrats. He said it takes a long time to change a one-party State, or a one-party city, in voting habits.

Taft said that under Lodge's proposal, Bryan would have beaten McKinley in 1896.

Lodge noted that 19 Senate Republicans had voted for his resolution. It was opposed by 24, including Taft.

Train Runs Wild, Wrecks Station

Mehoopany, Pa., Feb. 26. (AP)—Twenty cars of a Buffalo-New York freight ran wild through this tiny farming town today, wrecking the train station and a creamery.

No one was injured in the accident, which occurred at 4:40 a. m., less than an hour before workmen were to report at the Dairymen's League Creamery.

Huge quantities of beef, lamb and butter were strewn over the tracks in and around Mehoopany, a town of 700 some 40 miles north of Wilkes-Barre.

All the lights of Mehoopany were put out as wires snapped before the rampaging refrigerator cars.

Indonesia Asks Extradition

Dutch Ex-Commando Arrested On His Malaya Dash by British

Westerling Sought On Charges He Led Guerilla Revolt

Singapore, Feb. 26 (AP).—Swashbuckling Capt. R. P. P. (Turk) Westerling was arrested by the British today, and Indonesia immediately demanded his extradition on charges of leading a guerilla revolt.

It was understood the 30-year-old former Dutch army commando will not be charged with an extraditable offense, however. He was arrested on a charge of entering this colony without a permit under an emergency regulation which allows his detention for only seven days.

During that time, immigration authorities must decide whether to deport him or grant him an entry permit.

If returned to Indonesia, informed sources there said, he would face the death penalty.

Westerling, who led a force of native deserters from the Dutch army in the surprise capture of West Java's capital, Bandoeng, January 23, was said by one of his friends to have come here to get arms and ammunition for his rebel movement. Presumably he hoped to contact smugglers and gun runners.

"I can take Jakarta like I took Bandoeng but I want more arms. I have got a big job to do," a friend quoted him as boasting.

He was said to have slipped ashore four days ago from a plane which landed him near the coast and put him aboard a rubber boat. A fisherman picked him up when

Last-Minute Parley Fails to Effect Coal Strike Settlement

Talks, Recessed Early Today, Will Resume After Start Of Contempt Trial

By The Associated Press

Government-prodded negotiations failed early today to bring a settlement in the long coal dispute within hours of a contempt of court trial for John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

Under steady pressure from Government officials, representatives of the operators and the United Mine Workers pushed their contract talks on past midnight. But no settlement had been reached when the conference recessed early today.

The union is scheduled to go on trial at 10 a. m. on Department of Justice charges that the approximately 372,000 soft coal miners have defied a court no-strike order. Mediators tried desperately to win a contract agreement before that time.

David L. Cole, chairman of the presidential board of inquiry in the dispute, said that he was more hopeful earlier in the evening than he was when the conference recessed.

To Resume Talks Today

Nevertheless, Cole said, the operators and miners agreed to meet again at 11 a. m. to continue contract discussions.

Cole and Cyrus S. Ching, Conciliation Service chief, said that the unusual Sunday discussions were "very serious."

"They really negotiated on every point," Cole said, "but they could not reach agreement."

Cole said he did not think it would be fair to the parties to discuss the details of the intense negotitaions.

The inquiry board chairman told reporters he had not been in touch either with the White House or with Lewis, who had been absent from the negotiations because of the death of a brother in Springfield, Ill.

Stress Critical Supply Picture

He said that he and Ching had impressed on the parties the necessity for reaching an agreement because of the critical coal supply picture.

He added that the operators and miners themselves in conference "tried to impress that on one another."

Questioned closely by newsmen as to whether there was agreement on any one point toward a new contract, Cole said:

"I can't express any view on that."

He explained he thought that was something that the parties should disclose if there was to be any announcement

The mediators said there was no discussion of a possible union ef-

Power Plant Damaged

Non-Union Coal Mine Wrecked By Three Dynamite Blasts

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 26 (AP).—Three dynamite blasts early today wrecked a small non-union coal mine and damaged an Alabama Power Co. substation.

The mine, operated by Thomas L. Cooley, had continued in operation during the strike of union miners. It employed eight men and produced about 35 tons of coal daily.

Cooley said the substation explosion cut off all electric power in the area. One of the charges had apparently been hurled against the station's instrument house, which is on the mine property.

Cooley estimated damage at between $4000 and $5000. No one was injured.

The owner said the explosions virtually destroyed his ventilating and blowing equipment and caused serious damage to hoisting machinery.

He added that United Mine Worker representatives had been persistent in efforts to get him to close down since January 1.

Harvey Harrison, mine caretaker, who lives 100 yards away, said "the first explosion nearly knocked me out of bed. I got my rifle when another explosion almost knocked me down. There was a third blast and then they left."

The Cooley mine is six miles south of Alabaster, Ala., in Shelby County, an area of small truck mines which normally operate only when business is good.

State Criminal Investigator Ben Allen said the explosive charges apparently were placed by persons familiar with mining operations and with the Cooley mine.

Zoo's Leopard Still at Large As Hundreds Search Wide Area

Oklahoma City, Feb. 26 (AP).—Weary, sunburned hunters late today halted a Sunday safari when darkness made it too dangerous to hunt a jungle-bred leopard which yesterday escaped from the Lincoln Park Zoo here.

Zoo Director Julian Frazier called off the search after a day in which hundreds of armed State troopers, Marine reserves and area sportsmen scoured the underbrush for the animal. Four planes hovered over the area all day and officers set fire to a 40-acre section of woodland two miles east of Edmond in an effort to flush the beast..

Just as Frazier prepared to end the hunt, a plane reported sighting the leopard about three miles east of the flaming wooded section.

Frazier led a group of men there but that clew proved futile.

The zoo director said he would post a motor patrol around the zoo area tonight and the search would be resumed Monday.

Meanwhile, State highway patrolmen and city park employes broadcast a livestock warning to farmers in the section. Authorities believe the leopard will make a kill for food tonight, He was last fed Saturday morning.

Farmers in a 10-mile radius from the burned-off area were warned to guard their cattle and not permit their wives or children to go out unless accompanied by armed escorts.

Frazier and his zoo staff have had no sleep and have eaten on the run since the leopard vaulted from his 18-foot-deep pit to freedom Saturday afternoon.

Since then this city of 245,000 persons alternately has been frightened and curious. Mothers in the northeast section of town kept an eye on their children at play, but literally thousands of motorists jammed the search area to see the goings-on.

Authorities decided to put the torch to the 40-acre section of woodland after the leopard was reported seen in that area by Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Brown of Oklahoma City.

Another group of searchers was

Chairman Straight Says Veterans Face Sellout by Machine

The American Veterans Committee last night assailed the American Legion "for selling out the veteran" with its campaign against Hoover Commission-proposed reforms for the Veterans Administration.

Michael Straight, national chairman of AVC, charged here in a statement that the "Legion's top brass is not really concerned with providing better service for the veteran.

"Its concern," said Straight, "is for the members of the Legion machine who are entrenched in cushy VA jobs. The Legion is attacking the Hoover Commission's much-needed reforms because it fears it may lose its power over local VA installations and of the patronage that goes with that power."

District Shivers Continue; Cold Causes 14 Fires

Washington and the Eastern Seaboard down to northern Florida will have normal weather today—normal for Canada, said the Weather Bureau.

How chilly it was in Washington last night was indicated by the fact that the Fire Department responded to 14 alarms for fires caused mainly by overheated stoves and furnaces.

Highest temperature yesterday was 30 degrees at 1:10 p. m. It dropped to a low of 21 degrees at 11:45 p. m. Early today it is expected to drop to 18 in the city, and 14 in the suburbs, accompanied by strong winds. The rest of Monday will be "mostly sunny, continued cold, high about 35." Tuesday will be cloudy and warmer.

In western Maryland a low of 5 to 10 above zero was forecast for early today.

5 Killed, 1 Injured In Auto-Train Crash

Richmond, Ind., Feb. 26 (AP).—Five persons were killed early today in a collision between an automobile and a Pennsylvania Railroad diesel passenger train here. One was hurt critically.

The dead are Robert King, 28, R.R. 2, New Paris, Ohio; Dolly May Johnson, 41; Woodrow Dadisman, 24, and his wife, Carmello, 24, all of Richmond, and Orville Howard, 42, of Indianapolis. The injured man is Edgar Matheny, 24, of Richmond.

Smoke Hampers Fighters

Fire in 14th St. Liquor Store Drives Four to Street in Cold

Fire in a liquor store last night drove one man into the street in sub-freezing temperature clad only in underwear, shoes and socks. It also forced another family out.

The blaze was in the store of George Jameson, at 2818 14th st. nw. A huge volume of smoke hampered firemen until they smashed windows and ventilated the place to reach the flames.

Fred B. Kraft, member of Truck Company No. 6, suffered from smoke inhalation. He was treated at the scene by Rescue Squad No. 2, and remained on duty.

Mark H. Elgin, a bus driver for Capital Transit Co., who occupies the second-floor apartment, said he smelled smoke about 8:30 p. m., and before he had a chance to seize his clothes, it filled his bedroom and forced him into the hall. He telephoned firemen, then fled to the street.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. James, jr., and their daughter, Nancy Belle, who occupy a third-floor apartment, joined Elgin in flight. They provided Elgin with a blanket.

Battalion Chief Roy B. Hamback said the entire ceiling in the rear of the place was aflame and the blaze had eaten into walls. He would not speculate on the cause and estimate of damage. Deputy Chief Fred Litteral said the apartments were damaged by smoke and water.

Sly Cake Crook Baffles Police And Irks Baker

Police and a bakery manager were thoroughly vexed yesterday over the sweetest burglary story ever told.

For the past three Sunday mornings, and also the morning of Washington's birthday, a marauder has smashed the front door glass and looted the bakery of cake and doughnuts.

Yesterday morning, he carried away 14 pounds of cake, still warm from the oven. The total take in four trips has been 90 pounds. Mostly, the delicacy that attracted him was loaf cake, in 3½-pound loaves.

Charles Lampiris, manager of the Rich Bakery, 35 F st. nw., told police that the burglar works on the only mornings when no employes are at work. And Lampiris admits he is pretty tired of losing his toothsome baked goods, as well as replacing door glass.

The burglar, Lampiris said, made an attempt to get into the place early Saturday morning. Apparently he couldn't wait until Sunday. But an employe frightened him away. He returned, though, faithfully, yesterday morning.

One angle puzzled investigating policemen. The only other things the burglar took were some small tools, a wrench, screwdriver, and similar items. What they have to do with his appetite for sweets, neither detectives nor Lampiris can guess.

Surplus Potato Sale at Any Price Urged

By The Associated Press

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) said yesterday he has asked the government to sell its surplus potatoes piling up under price supports "for any price you can get."

Thomas, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said he had written this request to Secretary of Agriculture Brannan and assured him that the government has the authority to take this step.

"I know that will cause a lot of howls from some potato farmers who now are getting fancy prices 'way above government support levels," Thomas told a reporter.

"But somebody gets hurt in all these programs and I'd rather see surplus potatoes go to hungry people than be destroyed or used to subsidize commercial industries."

He said surplus cotton has been disposed of that way in the past by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Government-owned potatoes now are available for relief purposes and school lunch programs upon payment of transportation.

The Senate is scheduled to complete action today on a bill covering potatoes and cotton, after knocking out on a 43-to-35 vote a proposal to end all Government price suports on potatoes until a new law applying rigid controls is enacted.

Instead of this plan, the lawmakers approved a substiuite by Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) to restrict suports until potato growers accept Federal marketing agreements and orders.

Failure to Pick Up Tab for 'Pickups' Puts 3 in Lockup

New York, Feb. 26 (NYHT).—Three youths met five girls at the Ethical Culture Society and went to the Copacabana with them Saturday night on the understanding that an uncle of one of the girls had engaged a table for them and would pick up the tab.

The girls enjoyed steaks and drinks and then excused themselves to go to the rest room. They didn't come back, and a bill for $46.84 was presented to Eugene Palermo, 18; Conrad Toch, 18; and Marcus Dieter, 17, who had $22 among them.

They brooded over ethics and culture in jail until Palermo's father, James, paid the bill, whereupon charges of disorderly conduct were dropped.

A Houseful of Burkes Helps Observe Golden Anniversary

The Washington Post

Granddaughters Agnes Cecilia (left) and Ellen Marie Burke congratulate Mr. and Mrs. William Burke on anniversary

The buffet supper featuring the golden wedding anniversary of William and Mary C. Burke of 1416 Potomac ave. se., was served in shifts yesterday.

The reason—9 children, 13 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. They made the six-room house a little crowded.

Mr. and Mrs. Burke, 72 and 68 years old, respectively, were married at St. Stephen's Church 25th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., on February 27, 1900.

Mrs. Burke, daughter of Rosanna Devlin MacDonald and Peter MacDonald, was born in Washington.

Mr. Burke, a native of New York City, came to Washington after he had been mustered out of the Navy following service in the Spanish-American War. For meritorious conduct while serving as a coxswain aboard the battlewagon USS Indiana at the Battle of Santiago he subsequently was decorated. His trip here took three days because of a winter storm.

He later worked at various times at the United States Naval Gun Factory and served in the cavalry from 1904 to 1907 and again during World War I, which led to a service disability.

The Burkes' nine children include: Mrs. Robert Hatter, 5620 Kansas ave. nw.; Mrs. Marie Buckler, 2221 30th st. se.; Mrs. Mildred Ireland, 5033 11th st. ne.; John L. W. Burke, William J. Burke, Thomas Edward Burke, Paul Michael and Peter Patrick Burke, who are twins, and Francis Antho..y Burke, all of whom live at the Potomac avenue address. A tenth child, Mrs. Margaret C. Greene, who died three years ago, was a yeomanette during World War I.

Terretts Observe Golden Anniversary

It's been a happy life for Thomas Terrett, jr., 82, and his wife, the former Maude Emily White, 65, who celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday at their apartment at 2706 Cathedral ave. nw.

Married in Barcroft, Arlington County, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Terrett came to the District 30 years ago, shortly after his retirement from a successful career as miller, merchant and raiser of horses for the cavalry at Fort Myer.

Since then, they have enjoyed themselves with their family of two sons and two daughters, seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild, and with their flower gardening.

Most of the family members were on hand yesterday for the celebration, and their children recalled some of their father's varied activities, which he believes kept him hale and hearty.

Their children are Thomas V. Terrett of 2300 Connecticut ave. nw., Mrs. Ruth Earle of Annapolis, Mrs. Katherine Parsons and R. W. Terrett, who live with their parents.

Democrats Not Socialists To Sen. Lodge

By the United Press

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.) said yesterday he is unable to agree with the GOP leadership that the issue of the 1950 campaign is "liberty vs. socialism."

That rallying cry was used recently when Republican leaders of Congress and the GOP National Committee drafted a restatement of party policy.

"I don't believe that the Democrats are socialists," Lodge told a panel of newsmen on the "Meet the Press" television program.

Lodge said he doesn't believe his party leaders have seen the light and taken the leadership demanded of them. As for his own political aspirations, he added: "I definitely am not a (presidential) candidate for 1952."

He said he did not know whom he would support in the presidential campaign two years hence. He commented that he did not know whether he would support Senator Robert A. Taft, (R., Ohio), a leading contender with whom Lodge has frequently tangled over legislation.

Questioned about the fact that Republicans had approved a civil rights plank in their revived platform, but that some GOP representatives had voted last week against a strong fair employment practices commission bill, Lodge replied: "The voter is going to look for performance, not promises."

Progressives Told to Seek 'Respectability'

Chicago, Feb. 26 (AP).—Progressive Party members were told today to ignore those who call them Communists and to recruit outsiders "to make us respectable."

They also were urged to concentrate this year on electing Congressmen, including some not flying Progressive colors.

Party leaders were told to take roots among Negroes and labor unionists and citizens who are in fear of war.

They were urged to work chiefly for peace, for more jobs and economic security, for civil rights laws, and for repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The advice was given to the third party's second national convention by O. John Rogge of New York and other top-ranking policy makers.

Rogge, former assistant United States Attorney General, reiterated Henry A. Wallace's disavowal of Communists and Soviet Russia.

He directed his plea to Republicans and Democrats, to members of the Americans for Democratic Action, and to those of "any other party."

He said "there is no other way" for them, adding:

"You will not find solutions to our problems within your existing structures."

Rogge conducted the Government's mass sedition trials of American Nazis, and recently defended Harold Christoffel, CIO unionist convicted of perjury in denying he was a Communist.

Convention denials by Wallace and by Rogge that Communists influence the Progressives drew a "whitewash" reply today from the ADA, a group which says it is non-Communist.

ADA's national director, Charles M. La Follette, said in Chicago:

"No one should be fooled by the obvious attempts being made at the Progressive convention to whitewash the organization.

"The Wallace movement is still dominated by the same Communist Party liners who have had control of it since its birth."

FTC Accuses Dental Firms Of Conspiracy

By the United Press

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday ordered the American Dental Trade Association and 143 manufacturer and distributor members to end an alleged price-fixing conspiracy in the dental goods trade.

It charged that the conspiracy had stifled competition and pushed up prices on instruments, alloys, cement, artificial teeth, drugs, and even chairs and office furniture sold to dentists by distributors.

This and other "collusive practices," the commission found, had a "dangerous tendency to create a monopoly" in both the manufacture and distribution of products.

It said the firms already had filed answers admitting the charges "solely for this proceeding." The language of the admissions would not permit them to be used in possible future FTC actions.

Its order affects 90 distributors, 47 manufacturers and six firms engaged both in the manufacture and distribution of dental goods. They are located in all but 12 of the 48 States, and handle more than 75 percent of all dental goods business in the country.

Truman to Get Sesqui Bid to Talk on 'Hill'

President Truman will be invited to address a joint session of Congress on April 14 as a special event of the Washington Sesquicentennial celebration, under present plans of the Sesquicentennial Commission.

A series of other events between April and November, estimated to cost about a million dollars, are on the Sesquicentennial program, a commission spokesman confirmed yesterday.

First will be a "Salute to Freedom" program on the Capitol Plaza April 15. This will include a dramatic scene reenacting the laying of the southern cornerstone of the District at Jones Point, Alexandria, on April 15, 1791.

Special religious observances are planned for Saturday and Sunday, April 15 and 16. A ball is scheduled for April 17 at the Statler Hotel.

Also planned are a national music festival, a salute to the States on May 2 and a parade on June 14, Flag Day.

A special feature will be a symphonic pageant on the life of George Washington, scheduled to open June 15 in the amphitheater now being constructed in Rock Creek Park.

Other programs being prepared include an air show in July, a celebration for all communities named Washington in the Nation, a folk festival and a country fair.

World Fund Report Warns of Inflation

By The Associated Press

A World Monetary Fund report hinted last night that many countries are in for further inflation.

Controls over consumer buying and foreign trade will not alone hold inflationary forces in check until they can be "wiped out or worked off," it said.

The report, prepared by the 48-nation fund's research chief, E. M. Bernstein, a former United States Treasury official, contained some plain words directed chiefly to Western European nations. It said:

"The immediate and urgent problem is to bring government outlay and investment to a level appropriate to the available output, so they will not add (new inflation) to the latent inflation."

Pressures Strong

The report conceded that in many countries the pressures are so strong that sudden dropping of controls would result in such a "considerable rise in prices that some governments will feel they simply cannot accept such a (decontrol) policy."

"But," it continued, "the prospect of wiping out or working off latent inflation in any moderate period of time is very slight.

"The continuance of controls on consumption for a mimimum of 5 to 10 years and perhaps even longer, which may be necessary to work off latent inflation, is an unpleasant prospect for people to whom the free use of income has already been denied for a decade.

"It is not unlikely that at some stage public opinion will prefer at least a partial activation of latent inflation to continued submission to extended consumer controls."

The report suggested that taxes and perhaps such steps as "forced loans (to government)" would help until governments feel safe in easing or ending controls.

The Bernstein report was one of a group of studies in the first issue of a new publication put out by the fund under the title of "Staff Papers."

Role of ECA

Another, also presented as work of staff experts and "not necessarily the views of officials or the executive board of the fund," dealt with "the role of the ECA program."

This report forecast "a serious contraction in United States exports as Economic Cooperation Administration (Marshall Plan) aid diminishes."

Substantial effects on most of the participating (foreign) countries also were forecast.

To gauge the scale, fund experts worked up an analysis of world trade covering most of 1948 and nearly half of 1949. It showed in part:

1. ECA-financed shipments made up about 63 percent of total United States exports to the Western European countries in the Marshall Plan.

2. Also they made up about 18 percent of the aggregate imports received in those countries, with the range for individual countries varying from one percent (Sweden) to 34 percent (Austria).

Bulgars Surprised By U. S. Action, Envoy Heath Says

Milan, Italy, Feb. 26 (U.P.).—U. S. Minister Donald R. Heath said today the Bulgarian government was "surprised and undoubtedly disappointed" at the State Department's abrupt severance of diplomatic relations with the Soviet satellite.

Heath and his party of 46, including all the American legation staff in Sofia, arrived here today en route to Paris.

Speaking of Bulgaria's domestic affairs, Heath said several friends of the late Premier Georgi Dimitrov had been expelled from the Politburo or removed from their government jobs.

"I don't know," he added, "whether you want to call that a purge. These things are very frequent in Iron Curtain countries where the slightest suspicion of 'deviationism' is sufficient to cause the fall of a man. It is a point that nothing is known about the fate of Dimitrov's friends."

Tito Warns Nation It Must Help Itself

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 26 (U.P.).—Marshad Tito again warned the Yugoslav people today that they cannot expect any special assistance from the West and must be ready to overcome present economic difficulties themselves.

Tito made the warning for the second time this month as he addressed delegates of the Peoples Front Coalition of Serbia, which concluded a two-day session at Kolaraz University here.

Stressing the same line he used in his first election speech eight days ago at Titovo Uzice, the Yugoslav Premier said:

"It is true that the situaion in our country is not easy. You know the reasons why it is not easy. But the situation is not so difficult that we will not be able to overcome these difficulties.

"We should realize that only with our own forces can we surmount them. Without expecting any special help from anyone, we must fulfill our planned target. We must realize that that really cannot be avoided."

Bulgar Revolt Against USSR Is Disclosed

Berlin, Feb. 26 (AP).—The newspaper Welt Am Conntag said today Bugarian army leaders had directed an unsuccesful revolt against Russian domination of their country following the death in Moscow last July of Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov.

One of these leaders, Ivan Kinov, army chief of staff, who had been called to Moscow after Dimitrov's death, told fellow officers on his return to Sofia he believed Dimitrov had been liquidated, the newspaper said.

The newspaper, which is linked with the daily Die Welt, British-licensed German language publication, said Soviet secret police forestalled the attempted revolt by arresting one-twelfth of all Bulgarian army officers, including Kinov.

A decree announced in Sofia last October 30, said Kinov and Boyan Bulgaranov, head of the army's political-management division, had been relieved of their duties. The decree, issued by the National Assembly's presidium, said the two officials had been given other assignments, but did not say what their new jobs were.

Hungary Names Non-Catholic As New Minister of Religion

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 26 (AP).—Hungary made a non-Catholic the minister of religion and public instruction today in an unexpected cabinet shuffle.

Jozsef Darvar, former minister of building, replaced Gyula Ortutey in the post, making the first time in Hungarian history that a non-Catholic has held the job. Darvas is a member of the Peasant Party and belongs to the Evangelical Church. About 70 percent of Hungary's population is Roman Catholic and it has been a respected tradition that a Roman Catholic should head the ministry of religion.

Istvan Kossa, the minister of finance, resigned along with Ortutey, who had held his post since September 24, 1947. Karoly Olt, secretary of the Presidential Council, took the finance post and Laszlo Sandor, 40, a veteran of the Communist underground, succeeded Darvas as minister of building.

Ortutey was a member of the once-powerful Smallholders Party and his resignation cuts Smallholder representation in the cabinet to two members. Just after the war the Smallholders comprised Hungary's biggest and most powerful political party. That was before the Communists, under Matyas Rakosi, siezed power.

Vinson Bill Due Today for Stand-by Draft

By the United Press

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee yesterday said he would introduce legislation today to put the peacetime draft on a stand-by basis.

He predicted that the bill, which would bar the armed forces from drafting any more men without the specific consent of Congress, will be approved by the committee in early March and by the full House by early April.

Under Vinson's proposal, youths 18 through 26 would be required to register, and would be classified by local draft boards according to family status and employment. But they could not actually be inducted without further congressional action.

The present draft law expires on June 24. Vinson said his proposal would run until June 30, 1953.

Adoption of Vinson's bill would be a sharp setback for the Administration. President Truman asked for a three-year extension of the existing law, under which youths 18 to 26 are registered, and those 19 to 26 may be inducted.

There have been no inductions under the present draft law for more than a year. Mr. Truman and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson asked, however, that the authority to draft be left unchanged so that officials can act quickly if a new emergency arises.

When formidable antidraft sentiment developed during hearings before Vinson's committee, Johnson agreed to a compromise proposal under which either the President or Congress could order a resumption of inductions.

Vinson refused to go even that far. He maintained that Congress can act swiftly in the event of an emergency.

His bill would eliminate the provision of present law under which 18-year-old youths may volunteer for one year. It also would take out the provision under which those who are drafted serve 21 months.

The armed services instead would have to rely on three-year enlistments to get their additional manpower.

Truman to Broadcast For Red Cross Tuesday

President Truman will launch the 1950 American Red Cross campaign with a special message Tuesday.

The Red Cross said the President will speak from the White House at 10:55 p. m. (EST) at the end of a half-hour program to be broadcast by three radio networks (ABC, CBS, MBS).

175 pounds of vicious leopard growls from cage in Zoo before escape

Zoo's Leopard Still at Large working in the Wicher (Okla.) area, 14 miles northeast of Oklahoma City and about 10 miles north of the zoo. Fresh tracks were spotted there.

The huge search effort, which grew from a party of some 40 police officers early today to a mob of several hundred, is supplied with walkie-talkies and four "cat hounds."

The leopard leaped from its 18-foot pit, hit a wall, and jumped over a moat to freedom Saturday afternoon. Horror-stricken visitors witnessed the escape.

Captured in India less than two months ago, the male leopard was flown here with its mate from California February 18.

Mrs. Bertha White, 31, 4708 Upshur st., Bladensburg, Md., was in serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital yesterday as the result of a bullet wound in the right side.

Nebel said the husband hid the .32-caliber revolver in a dog house, but agreed to hold the dog while police recovered the weapon so the dog would not have to be shot.

Anti-Conscriptionists Decry College Military Emphasis

By The Associated Press

More than a score of educators and others issued a protest yesterday against what they call "the systematic and well-financed efforts of the national military establishment to penetrate and influence the civilian educational life of America."

Their detailed report, a booklet of 80 pages of fine print, was put out through the National Council Against Conscription. Signers include scientist Albert Einstein, author Louis Bromfield, Chancellor William P. Tolley of Syracuse University, the Very Rev. John A. Flynn, president of St. John's University in Brooklyn; James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union; Bishop Gerald Kennedy of the Oregon area of the Methodist Church, and 20 others.

The report centers on activities of reserve officers training units, military science teaching, research contracts with universities, and what it sees as a trend toward putting military men in high educational places, exemplified by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's appointment as Columbia's president.

The booklet says that in some colleges military subsidy of research has placed some schools in a position of dependence upon military funds for their existence.

The group complains that "war-making is taught in more than a hundred colleges, each of which has its department of military science and tactics, while only two or three colleges in the country have specific courses in or departments of peace."

Study Urged Of Situation After ERP

A House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee yesterday urged creation of a special Government commission to study what economic help the United States can give Western Europe after Marshall Plan aid ends in 1952.

The proposal was made in a report by Representative Joseph L. Pfeifer (D., N. Y.), Thomas S. Gordon (D., Ill.), Clement J. Zablocki (D., Wis.) and Jacob K. Javitz (R.-Lib., N. Y.). They visited Europe last fall to survey recovery progress in Britain, Italy and France.

Assuming that outright grants of United States cash to Marshall Plan countries will end on schedule in 1952, the subcommittee said it is time to begin thinking about what happens then.

Particular attention should be given to ways in which the United States can "expand markets" for western European countries, so they can earn their own way in foreign trade by exporting the products of their rebuilt industry, the group said.

One possibly highlighted in the report is rapid extension of President Truman's "Point Four" program of raising living standards in underdeveloped areas of Asia and Africa.

Along similar lines, the subcommittee urged present ERP officials to give "greater attention" to encouraging development of the colonial possessions of western European countries.

Woman Slain, Thrown Nude, Bound in Lake

Alexander City, Ala., Feb. 26 (U.P.). The nude, bound and hooded body of an elderly woman fished from Lake Martin confronted police today with a murder plot that they feared claimed more than one victim.

"There may be another body in there," said Deputy Sheriff J. L. Ingram of Tallapoosa County. He explained that blood stains found on a highway bridge railing near the body's location did not match the woman's blood in tentative tests.

Police believed that the slain woman was thrown into the huge artificial lake, a favorite Alabama resort area, from a car traveling east toward Columbus, Ga., from the Birmingham area.

That she had been coldly marked for murder, slain and disposed of was beyond dispute. She had been shot three times with a .38-caliber weapon. Any of the shots was enough to have killed her. She had been clubbed on the head. There was no immediate clew to who she was.

Before or after she was slain the woman had been bound hand and foot, gagged and hooded. She wore only her stockings and large-size black shoes. Ingram estimated she was 65 to 70 years old and weighed at least 175 pounds.

A lakeside cafe operator saw the body floating under the bridge yesterday afternoon. Officers under Police Chief G. M. Horton recovered the body about 50 yards upstream.

The woman had been in the water about two days, a State toxicologist from Auburn estimated. Investigators found a piece of torn tablecloth and a scarf on the bridgeway.

City and county officers also found an Army duffel bag, containing cut-up scraps of clothing, in the lake. Stains on the scraps apparently were the woman's blood, police said.

A gag apparently made from a scrap of her dress had been thrust into the woman's mouth. Then a hood, made from an undergarment, had been pulled over her face and knotted about her throat. She still wore her glasses under the hood. One lens was broken.

This Kenley Kid Has Been Around

By Richard L. Coe

JOHN KENLEY, the youthful-looking producer who brings live professional theater back under a Washington roof next week, mused about his first Washington memories.

"I played Poli's in the 'Greenwich Village Follies.' Also in the chorus was Martha Graham. That was when she was still a dancer. Hmmm. I did all the one-two-three-kick things in those days and when President Colidge came backstage to greet the star, the cast kidded me and said he'd come back to tell me how swell I was as a clown. I believed every word and as soon as he came back I burst through the secret service men and all to thank him for coming. I never have been what you'd call a backward child."

John's youthful looks belie that 25-year stage association and, of course, he was a youngster when he started out. But it's certainly true that John's not a backward child even now.

He's booked his Susan Peters production of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" into the Gayety not for any high-flown gesture of bringing art back to the National Capital. "I'm after the bucks that I know are here for the live theater," he says candidly.

His experiment—playing straight drama in the old citadel of burlesque—has the more august captains of the theatarical world looking on with interest. "All those big boys," John smiles, "have talked big about bringing theater to Washington but you must admit they've not done anything. So there they are, watching me, a summer stock operator, working with only my own money and that of two friends, bursting in where those angeled fellows fear to tread.

"I think we've got a good production and Susan is really a remarkable young woman. She's learning all the time and you'll find her even better than she was last summer at Olney. When the Gayety became available, I grabbed it right away, but as I say, it is funny how with all the big capital and backing some producers have to work with, it's little me and my minor fortune they're watching before they take the plunge."

Merchant Seaman in Winter

Kenley finds it strange to be working in theater this time of year. Usually his winters are like no one else's in show business. He works on freighters as a purser, junkets all over the globe. He says he gets enough theater in the six months he spends running his summer playhouse and that the total wintertime reversal of his life is a wonderful thing.

That summer theater is like few others on the citronella circuit. It's at Lakewood Park, Pa., not far from Scranton. His patrons are the mining families, who've gotten to know the Kenley players during the past decade.

"I only charge $1.50 top, which makes some of the other summer managers livid. I give the same stars and the same plays they do and they don't understand why I don't use their $3 top. Well, I don't because I'd rather have full houses every night than be stuck with a batch of empty seats. Such folk as Gloria Swanson, Lizabeth Scott, Larry Parks, Ruth Chatterton, Susan Peters and Paul Lukas come down. They got along swell with the miners, drink with them after the show and everybody winds up friends.

Private Capital Takes a Bow

"At first look, the set-up isn't too prepossessing for the stars who are accustomed to the chi-chi of New England summer houses and your Olney. But once they get settled, they always want to come back. Yes, Lakewood is wonderful. That was where I met Susan last summer and how we came to work out this tour after her success up there."

John didn't jump straight from the chorus to management. He spent a full decade as Lee Shubert's right-hand man, as playreader, factotum in general.

Merchant-mariner, independent producer, ex-chorus boy, Kenley is, as you can see, quite a character. Very little is sacred to John and everything is fun.

But what makes him laugh the hardest is the fact that it's taken him, a minor league impressario using his own money, to beat the big league boys to an area where a million and a quarter people haven't been getting what he's got to offer.

"Just another triumph for private capital," he chuckles.

Three Government Employes To Terminate Long Service

Three men with outstanding records in Government service will retire this week.

They are Herbert S. Lewis, editor of topographic maps, United States Geological Survey; Lawrence G. Parker, structural engineer, General Services Administration; and Thomas F. Young, furnace room fireman, General Services Administration.

Lewis

Lewis, a native of Baltimore, began work in 1900 as a civil engineer with the District of Columbia sewer department, after graduation from Lehigh University.

Within two years, however, he took a Civil Service examination and went to the Geological Survey as topographic draftsman, assigned to make editors' corrections on maps. He's worked at maps ever since.

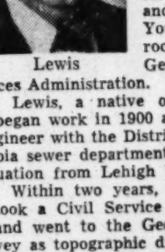
MSS Chief

He is now chief of the manuscript inspection unit, which does final editing of all maps produced by the topographic division. He has become a specialist on map nomenclature. He and Mrs. Lewis live at 6806 Eastern ave. nw., where he plans to enjoy his retirement. He will be presented with an engraved certificate, illuminated scroll, and a retirement gift at an office ceremony at 4 p. m., Tuesday.

Parker became interested in engineering as a boy in Illinois when he played with a toy pile-driver. He took a degree in civil engineering at the University of Illinois in 1902, and went into private practice. He was associated with structural design of a number of huge buildings in Chicago including the Morrison, Drake, and Edgewater Beach hotels, Civic Opera Bldg., and Marshall Field Office Bldg.

Entered Government in 1934

Entering Federal Government service in 1934, he continued his structural design work, but was diverted to U. S. Coast Guard shore facilities during the war.



Young

Parker's retirement will come Friday. He will celebrate his seventieth birthday on Saturday. He lives at 1820 Clydesdale pl. nw.

Most picturesque of those retiring is Young. Forty years ago he reported for work as a fireman dressed in a panama hat, wing collar, red vest with gold buttons, English walking coat, pin-striped trousers and spats. He carried a cane. Roy L. Swenson, now a GSA official, was in charge of the boiler room. He recalls that he nearly fainted when he saw the new fireman.

Never Lost Day

But though his addiction to fancy clothing continued, Young worked for 40 years without losing a single day from illness. J. A. Velardi, another GSA official, and Young, agree that the now 70-year-old fireman has contributed a vast amount of work time to the Government without recompense.

When he appears at a retirement ceremony at 1 p. m., Tuesday, in the Thomas Jefferson Auditorium, Department of Agriculture South building, he won't have the red vest with gold buttons. Otherwise, his dress will be much the same as when he went to work: wing collar, bow tie, pin-striped trousers, fedora hat and cane.

Capital Transit Official Retires After 56 Years

A career of 56 years of continuous service with Capital Transit Co., and its predecessors, will close Tuesday, for John Fleming, director of purchases and stores and assistant secretary of the company.

In 1893, when horse cars were still on the streets here, Fleming started as a shop apprentice with the old Georgetown Railroad Co. Since then he has been clerk, secretary to the chief engineer and superintendent, storekeeper, and purchasing agent of the Capital Traction Co. When a merger created the Capital Transit Co., in 1933, he became assistant secretary and purchasing agent. He took his present job in 1948.

Fleming is a former chairman of the purchases and stores division of the American Transit Association; a charter member of the Washington Purchasing Agents Association; member of the Washington Board of Trade; and former president of the Capital Transit Quarter Century Club.

Saturday night, CTC officials honored him at a dinner at the Columbia Country Club, and Friday fellow workers gave him a party in his office.

Fleming, who lives at 1824 Kilbourne pl. nw., said he has no plans for retirement except to "get to know my grandchildren better."

Group Health, Inc., Holds 12th Annual Meeting Monday

Group Health Association, Inc., Washington's member-owned medical service agency, will hold its twelfth annual meeting tonight.

Principal speakers will be Senator Paul H. Douglas, (D., Ill.), and Dr. Charles L. Dunham, medical chief of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Senator Douglas is scheduled to offer: "A New Proposal in the Field of Health Insurance"; Dr. Dunham's topic will be "The Use of Atomic Energy in the Treatment of Disease."

The meeting will be held at 8 p. m., at the New Interior Building Auditorium, between 18th and 19th sts. and C st. nw.

Judge Waring Hits Anew at Segregation

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—A South Carolina Federal judge told a Harlem church audience today that Southerners are "obsessed with the false doctrine of white supremacy."

The speaker, United States District Court Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston, is now sitting on the bench in the Southern District of New York, which he has done yearly since 1943.

He spoke at the Convent Avenue Baptist Church in one of a series of programs sponsored by the Harlem Interracial Platform.

The racial problem in the South, said Waring—who has been outspoken against racial segregation—is "not a Negro problem" but "a white problem."

"The white people of my part of the country are sick mentally, obsessed with the false doctrine of white supremacy," he said.

Approximately 800 persons heard Waring demand that the laws that make segregation "respectable" be eliminated.

His wife, who recently called Southern whites "morally weak and low" in connection with the racial discrimination issue, sat on the church platform with her husband.

The Warings say they have been snubbed socially in Charleston since 1947, when Waring ruled from the bench that the Democratic Party of South Carolina was not a private club and that Negroes had the right to vote in the primaries.

Postlude

Symphony Features U. S. Music

By Richard Keith

Yesterday afternoon's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall offered two major works by contemporary American composers.

Howard Mitchell deserves praise and encouragement for such a radical step in program building. All too often conductors pay their brief and hurried respects to modern writers by squeezing them in the first or last five minutes of the program.

Yesterday Mitchell paid his respects to the conventional in the first half hour by playing the Franck symphony; he then devoted the rest of the time to Emerson Meyers' Concertino for Piano and Orchestra and Paul Creston's Symphony No. 2. Both works have been played before in Washington and we hope will be played in the future. Neither is very radical stylistically, or difficult to grasp. These qualities make them ideal for proselytizing purposes.

Doubtless, many people came yesterday solely to hear their beloved Fanck and then stayed on reluctantly to get their money's worth. Judging by the animated applause after each piece and by comments overheard after the concert, many people were surprised to find themselves really liking this new stuff.

Meyers, who played the piano part in his concertino, has a well developed, highly individual style of writing. It could best be described as melodically versatile and rhythmically dynamic. The concertino never rambles but keeps strictly to the business of logical statement. The final variation gives an exciting finish to this excellent composition.

Creston's Second Symphony is a symphonic attempt to apotheosize the song and dance. As might be expected the first part is very melodic and the second, very rhythmic. The writing is sure and sophisticated throughout and the suave treatment of material never lets the listener relax. He has a style of writing which is almost devoid of definite cadences, the end of one phrase coinciding with the beginning of the next. This gives his music a serene and flowing quality but at times produces the effect of a series of run-on sentences.

The orchestra played with uniform excellence throughout.

Sit-Downers Ask Severance Pay

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—Huddled in wraps against the cold, and living on tea and coffee, 18 greeting card workers tonight went into the third day of a sit-in strike.

The workers, a dozen of them women and many middle-aged or elderly, are fighting to keep jobs that pay from $34 to $49 a week.

The company, Fuld and Co., is planning to move to Catskill, N. Y., and discharge the present employees.

Through the Independent Wholesale and Warehouse Workers Union, the workers are demanding that they be moved with the company or given severance pay.

Company president Henry Goldsmith said the union is fighting over "something that doesn't exist at all."

He said there is no severance pay clause in a contract that expires Wednesday and added that the company had to plan to move because its rent was being raised.

Since 5 p. m. Friday the workers have sat it out in the Fourth Avenue offices, the building getting colder all the time with the heat cut off over the weekend.

Tonight the temperature was 22 degrees outside.

A police guard prevents the union from sending food in to the strikers, and all they have had since the strike started is tea and coffee heated on a small burner.

Of the original 21 sit-in strikers only three have gone through the one-way police cordon. Two of these were elderly women.

Union organizer Sol Molofsky said a full-scale strike complete with picket line would go into effect Monday.

The sit-in, he said, was a measure to keep the company from moving out the equipment over the weekend.

Israel Seeking Arms From U. S. And Britain

By The Associated Press

The government of Israel has appealed to the United States and Britain for arms and military equipment to bolster its army and air force, diplomatic officials disclosed yesterday.

The Israeli ambassadors here and in London were said to have presented detailed requests to the State Department and the British Foreign Office.

Top State Department officials were reported drafting a formal American reply after consultation with the British on the ticklish problem.

The Israeli request apparently is aimed at offsetting the shipment of British arms to the Arab countries in the Middle East. Israeli officials, and some American Congressmen, have denounced the British for the shipments.

To Talk on Trapps

The Very Rev. John P. McCormick, rector of the theological college of the Catholic University, will speak on "The Trapp Family and Catholic Life" at the Study Guild Catholic Library, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw., at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday.

Three 'Abandoned' Children Await Mothers' Return

Three children, discovered crying Saturday night when their baby sitter left them temporarily, were held at the Industrial Home School annex last night until their mothers claim them.

The youngsters, ages 4 months to 4 years, were found at their home 1127 11th st. nw., by Pvts. C. L. Ellert and L. V. Denny. After they had been taken to the Receiving Home, the "sitter," identified as Jack Bowers, 49, returned. He said he had been "around the corner."

He said the mothers, Mrs. Helen Lang and Mrs. Ann Shomaker left the children in his care while they visited out of the city.

Mental Disease Held Unrelated to 'Spirit'

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

"Mental disease as such has nothing to do with what is commonly referred to as 'spiritual life,'" the Rev. Dr. James Jerome Hayden declared yesterday.

Father Hayden, a member of the department of psychology and psychiatry at the Catholic University, spoke to about 300 at a discussion of Catholic doctrine and practice at the university.

"Though the moral and spiritual life of an individual is often seriously involved in mental illness, such involvement is only too frequently the outcome of profound unconscious conflict and not the cause of it," he said.

There is a strong inclination on the part of priests and ministers, he said, to believe that "religious counsel, piety and devotion will serve as both the prevention of and the cure for neurosis."

Asked whether, for Catholics, a "good confession" was not the prevention of mental illness, Father Hayden said that because many mental illnesses are caused by unconscious feelings of guilt, a person cannot confess what he does not know.

In the minds of many Catholics, the priest said, there is a "widespread distrust" of the fields of psychiatry and psychoanalysis.

Much of this, he said, is due to "confusion and misunderstanding" about what the two fields are and what they have to offer in the way of prevention and cure.

There is "genuine cause" for a lack of confidence in these professions because of the "crass materialism which analytical psychiatry has inspired in the fields," he said.

Freud's discoveries in the field of phychoanalysis, he said, should not be underestimated. Psychoanalysis, however, is a "highly specialized field and as such has its limitations," he continued.

"Any psychology born of an anti-Christian spirit cannot but be exceedingly dangerous," Father Hayden said, pointing out that Freud and many of his followers treated religion as a purely psychological fact.

If psychology and psychoanalysis are to have as their chief objectives growth in the field of moral responsibility, their findings and interpretations must be cast in a religious framework, Father Hayden said.

"The Catholic application of psychotherapy, like all phases of Catholic training," he concluded, "must be directed toward transformation of a child of flesh into a child of God."

Staff at Over-Crowded Kramer Awaits Transfer of 400 Students to New Sousa

The Washington Post
Miss Ethel Libbey, Kramer teacher, gets a preview of music room in the new Sousa School

More than 400 youngsters who have been learning first hand the life and times of the sardine will move out of their tins at Kramer and into roomy quarters at Sousa Junior High School about March 6.

At present 1580 pupils are packed in at Kramer, in space meant for not more than 1108.

Booming expansion in the Southeast has overflowed schools in the area.

Kramer, completed in 1913, at 17th and Q sts. se., is one of the most modern schools in the city. But advantages of special facilities are eliminated by overcrowding—use of the library for classrooms, for example.

May Not Be Enough

Seeing what happened to modern Kramer casts a shadow across the delight in viewing sparkling Sousa over at 37th st. and Ely pl. se.

Said Board of Education President C. Melvin Sharpe yesterday:

"I predict that within a year or two Sousa will start to be overcrowded. The Southeast area is bursting its bridges. As far as schools go, the situation is worse there than anywhere in the city."

The best view of the Kramer situation is to be seen in the morning when four homeroom sections, having no classrooms, meet at separate tables in the cafeteria.

It would be funny if it were not so serious. Mrs. Eleanor Ostrinsky, math teacher, describes:

"Each section has its Bible reading, Lord's Prayer and salute to the Flag. One will get started on something, then another . . . well it's like Row, Row, Row the Boat."

Temporary Classrooms

The woman who lived in the shoe had it easy compared with Kramer Principal Catherine Crook, who has somehow found space for her charges but will be glad indeed to see March 6 march onto the calendar.

Four locker rooms partitioned off by beaverboard have been turned into classrooms. Through vents connecting them one classroom can hear what's going on in another. They've put up screens to keep the kids from passing things back and forth. Right overhead is the noisy gym.

You see a music class in an auditorium. The library is not a library—it has to be used for a classroom. The Home Ec dining room is also turned into a classroom.

There are grown-up sardines, too—the teachers.

Nine or more teachers don't have desks, to say nothing of regular classrooms. Mrs. Alice Eiss, history teacher, holds forth in 15 different rooms in the course of a week. She teaches geography in a room where there are no maps. Teachers jam around tables in the cramped teachers' rooms.

Kramer's a nice-looking place. Just too many people.

To go from Kramer . . . to Sousa . . . how does a sardine feel when it swims out of the tin?

Construction of $1,688,000 Sousa was begun July, 1948, completed December 28, 1949.

At Sousa Principal Eleanor McAuliffe is putting in one long day after another checking in and setting into place items ranging from pianos to fonts of type to spools of thread.

Sousa:

Large library, soft-blue walls, with a huge circular window like the bridge of a ship and the natural light pouring through it.

To Keep Noise Isolated

Classrooms with beautiful blond desks.

No gyms over classrooms—auditorium, the two gyms and two recreation rooms are all in a separate section of the building, to keep noise away from studying.

A music room with regular tiers for a choir or orchestra.

Large teachers' rooms, magnificently equipped workshops, a park (Fort Dupont) right across the street.

And above all the fact that, at least at the beginning, it won't be crowded. There'll be 500 students to start. Normal capacity is 1000.

It looks like a very happy home for more than 400 former sardines. At least until the school sardine situation catches up with Sousa.

Brotherhood Held 'Faltering Abstraction' in Church Talk

Brotherhood, one of the "best advertised and least utilized" concepts in the world has become a "faltering and ineffectual" abstraction, Charles D. Hudson said yesterday.

Hudson, an exporter and trade association executive, spoke at two morning services at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw. An active layman in the church. He lives at 611 Thornapple st., Chevy Chase, Md.

The United States, he said, has been guilty of "watered down brotherhood" in its Marshall Plan aid to Europe.

As a great Christian Nation, he said, the United States should be helping other nations "as an act of Christian brotherhood and not merely through fear or for military or political expediency."

In Alexandria, the Rev. Leonard S. Edmonds, director of the Department of Social Welfare of the Washington Federation of Churches, told a brotherhood meeting at the Bethune YWCA that intergroup relations have become the "number one" problem of the day.

From the standpoint of human relations, he said, we are "babes in the woods" while in the area of science we have become "mental giants." The hydrogen bomb in the hands of the world is "like placing a pistol in the hands of a 2-year-old child," he said.

Either we learn to obey God's commandments to love Him and love our neighbors and survive or "we scorn them and die," he said.

The two services were among the final events in the annual observance of Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christian and Jews.

Junior President Dies in U. of Pa. Fraternity Fire

Philadelphia, Feb. 26 (U.P.).—Robert K. Polliard, 23, University of Pennsylvania junior class president, died today in a fire at the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house.

Thirteen other members of the fraternity escaped from the building after making a vain attempt to reach Polliard in his blazing third-floor rear room.

Firemen carried Polliard out, but he was dead on arrival at Philadelphia General Hospital. It was believed he suffocated in his sleep.

The two-alarm fire, confined to Polliard's room and an adjoining chapter room, was discovered by Charles Stearns, who was asleep on the second floor. He shouted an alarm.

Nine other fraternity members, including Polliard's roommate, Arthur Houlihan, Chappaqua, N. Y., had gone home for the weekend.

GM Wage Cut

For the third time within a year—and no doubt for the last time—General Motors has announced a small reduction in wages under the terms of a contract linking wage adjustments to changes in living costs. Although admitting that the company's action is entirely legal, the union has denounced the wage cut as "morally indefensible" in view of the large profits earned last year by GM. If living costs had been rising, however, necessitating increases in wage rates, it is safe to say that the union would have expected the company to conform to the terms of the contract, whether profits were large or nonexistent.

In short, cost-of-living formulas are acceptable from the workers' viewpoint only when they result in wage increases. In some cases such formulas may be a satisfactory means of adjusting wages over short periods of time as an alternative to reopening wage contracts, especially during periods when prices are rising rapidly and erratically. But for the long pull they are poor devices. As a matter of fact, when the present contract with GM was signed, Walter Reuther, president of the UAW, said that the escalator clause providing for cost-of-living adjustments would not have been accepted by the union without the provision for a limited unconditional increase in hourly wages and restrictions on the permissible amount of wage reductions. That contract expires at the end of May, and Mr. Reuther has already stated that the escalator clause will not be renewed.

Generaly speaking, the inclusion of cost-of-living formulas in wage contracts is, in our opinion, likely to do more harm than good. For if the practice of adjusting wages to changes in living costs were to become general, companies whose profits failed to reflect a rise in the prices of goods and services bought by workers might be in serious trouble because of inability to pay higher wages. Moreover, if wages were determined solely with reference to changes in living costs, employers would be able to resist wage increases made possible by high profits or increased productivity, and the workers' real earnings, as distinguished from monetary returns, would stay put. As Mr. Reuther once said, labor would be "wedded to the status quo." So, while changes in living costs are important factors that have to be taken into account when wage contracts are negotiated, they are not the sole decisive test of the reasonableness of wage demands.

Insubordinate Counsel

The controversy between the National Labor Relations Board and its general counsel, Robert N. Denham, is not merely a clash of personalities. The board is obviously concerned about proper presentation of its point of view in labor cases that are being carried to the courts. It is Mr. Denham's duty to represent the board when its orders are challenged, and he so far forgot that duty last month as to state in a public address that he thought the board was wrong in several cases about to go to the courts. Indeed, he seemed to invite employers to take their cases against the NLRB to the courts where he will be the board's defender. It is not surprising that this anomalous situation should bring from the board an order that Mr. Denham shall defend its actions "in full accordance with the directions of the board."

To be sure, the general counsel is appointed by the President, and the Taft-Hartley Act gives him final authority in the investigation of charges of unfair labor practices and in the issuance of complaints. But the act also says that he "shall have such other duties as the board may prescribe." Apparently one of these is representation of the board in court. Certainly, then, the NLRB has a right to tell Mr. Denham what kind of representation it wishes to have. Nor does there seem to be any question about the right of the board to veto any important changes initiated by Mr. Denham in the offices of the regional directors, for the power to appoint such officials is lodged directly in the board.

If the restrictions laid upon Mr. Denham have the appearance of a vote of no-confidence, it must be admitted that he asked for it in his unwarranted attack of January 12. Too often Mr. Denham has acted as if he were a detached agency having no obligation to cooperate with the NLRB in getting an important job done. He needs to be brought back into his proper orbit as "general counsel of the board!" NLRB officials did not invent that term to belittle Mr. Denham in the process of a clash of personalities. They copied it out of the Taft-Hartley Act. If Mr. Denham continues to conduct his office as if the board were only a tail to his kite, Congress will have no alternative to spelling out his subordination to the board when the T-H law is modified.

End Of Rent Control

The action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in refusing the Housing Expediter's request for additional operating funds is equivalent to a vote to end Federal rent control. We hope the Senate will sustain the committee's action, since the extension of control can no longer be justified on the ground that housing shortages are so acute and so widespread as to create a national emergency. It is nearly five years since the end of the war. Most wartime controls have long since been dropped. Housing congestion has been alleviated by population shifts and by the recent rapid expansion of new residential housing, although rental housing construction has lagged far behind construction of houses for sale.

To be sure, there are a number of areas where rent control is still needed to protect tenants against profiteering landlords. But if the Federal Government waited until every community in the land could safely dispense with rent controls, there would be no foreseeable end to the Federal control system. Housing shortages have, as shown by the evidence, ceased to be a concern of the Nation and have become a local problem that should be the responsibility of State and local governments. The local authorities are acquainted with conditions in their communities; indeed, Federal officials have to depend on their knowledge and enlist their cooperation in administering control legislation.

The risks of decontrol are negligible compared with the advantages of relinquishing a discriminatory form of Federal regulation that denies to landlords the right accorded other property owners to sell their goods and service in the market for what they will bring. The patent inequity of the system is evident from the fact that rent increases in controlled areas have lagged far behind the rise in prices of other goods and increases in the wages and salaries of their tenants. It is further demonstrated by the gap between the rentals charged for occupancy of new properties not subject to control and rental of older controlled properties. Moreover, if Federal rent control were to be continued indefinitely, the construction of new rental housing would be discouraged. For even though the new structures are uncontrolled, rental charges cannot diverge too widely from those paid by occupants of comparable controlled properties.

Of course, removal of control will result in some rent increases that will be resented, and the transitional period of adjustment will bring hardships to some people. This is the price that has to be paid for the return to a system of free enterprise which will provide incentives for the construction of more housing accommodations in still congested centers of population. Meantime, State and local governments are in a position to ease transitional hardships by taking steps to prevent excessive increases in rentals. It is up to them to show the Federal Government that they are capable of handling their own affairs without being subject to its direction.

Press Censorship

More than one fourth of the world's populated area is directly subject to governmental censorship or other restraints on the free flow of news. Yet this dismal fact, culled from the latest semiannual world survey of news barriers by the Associated Press, by no means conveys the full impact of this kind of suppression. The whole populated world suffers from censorship wherever it is practiced. Even here in the United States there can be no free flow of news that is cut off at its source by foreign governmental intervention. Thus Americans, no less than the people who live under the immediate shadow of the censorship, are kept from a knowledge of events occurring on the crowded planet they inhabit.

Restraints on the press range all the way from formal censorship by a government to intimidation of correspondents by the threat of expulsion for "unfriendly" articles or to indirect means of pressure on the local press such as control of newsprint and machinery imports. In some countries, the Soviet Union and Egypt for example, censorship is candid and direct, taking the form of an official review of all dispatches before publication within the country or transmission outside its borders. But censorship is scarcely less effective and repressive in countries like Spain, where native newspapermen consider themselves virtually in the class of civil servants and foreign correspondents are held accountable for any "false" news they send out of the country, or in Turkey, where a newspaper can be punished for harming the "dignity of the nation." In South Africa recently, the Minister of Posts and Telegraph told foreign correspondents that "those who send reports to newspapers overseas slandering South Africa . . . must not expect of me that all their reports will reach their destination." In greater or less degree, all such restraints tend to shackle the minds of men.

The free-press tradition of the Western democracies is a corollary to the premise that governments exist to protect the rights of individuals and derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. The press is conceived of, therefore, as a check upon the arbitrary exercise of power on the part of the government (a censor of the government rather than an appropriate object of governmental censorship) and as an indispensable means of providing the governed with an informed basis for consent. A free press operates on the utilitarian assumption that truth will triumph over error in any unfettered conflict and that uninhibited expression, even of falsities, is a necessary means to the end of a mature and free society.

There is no free-press tradition, of course, in countries where the paramountcy of the state is assumed and individual rights are deemed subordinate to the interest of the collectivity. Where this view exists, it is easy to come to the conclusion that any criticism of the government is an attack upon the people. And, everything being related to national security, a foreign correspondent who sends out an unfavorable dispatch is naturally looked upon as an enemy of the country. It may be that some American correspondents have been hypercritical of conditions in countries with problems different from those with which the reporters are familiar and that they have inadequately reported the developments which local officials consider constructive and important. But censorship can serve only to breed a search for the forbidden and an emphasis on the concealed. And the repression of mistaken reports inevitably results in repression of the truth as well.

In any case there can be no official determination of the validity of news that does not corrupt what it aims to protect. When newspapermen are kept from reporting the truth as they see it, men everywhere are kept from the information necessary to an understanding of the problems that confront them. Barriers to the flow of news are inevitably barriers to human reconciliation and therefore barriers to peace.

DP Liberalization

Seven members of the Senate Judiciary Committee—a majority—have urged liberalization of Senator McCarran's restrictive version of the Displaced Persons bill which they joined in reporting favorably three weeks ago. This is apparently no change of heart or mind on their part. They gave their approval to the McCarran bill for the sake of getting the measure at long last to the Senate floor. But they reserved the right at the time to take any action they saw fit.

That they now see fit to support revision along lines of the bill adopted last session by the House is most heartening. For the McCarran version, no less than the law now in force, offers the refugees thirsting for liberation a mere mirage. It would retain the most discriminatory provisions of the present DP Act. And under the disguise of liberalization, it would complicate its already impossibly complex administrative difficulties. Moreover, it would invite many of the Volksdeutsch, who profited for a while from Hitler's conquests but have now been expelled from the lands they infiltrated, to supplant genuine DPs on the list of those awaiting visas.

Every day of delay in amending the DP law must be measured in terms of human tragedy. Senator McCarran has managed for far too long to keep the Congress of the United States from action that is impelled at once by its sense of humanity and its sense of international responsibility. We hope that the seven members of the Judiciary Committee who do not share his prejudices will now speed a genuinely liberalized measure to final enactment.

Deposed Despots

One of the minor revolutions that followed the war—the ending of male autocracy in the home in Japan and Germany—is now beginning to show noticeable effects. Mrs. Shima Kan, Japanese educator and political leader, now in this country, says that the "new freedom" in Japan is causing difficult psychological adjustments—on the part of the Japanese men. Formerly they were used to being household rulers, but their sovereignty has now gone. Anyone walking through the streets can sense this change, says Mrs. Kan, because the women's faces generally look bright and animated, the men's droopy. Most Japanese women, especially in cities, have taken up their new rights with enthusiasm.

In Germany the old husband-dominated household order also is crumbling from economic and social pressures, though many German women are seeing it go regretfully. Mrs. Harper Sibley of the United Council of Church Women, who made a three-month study of social institutions in Germany, recently predicted that within 20 years the German husband-dictator would be completely out of the picture. In another generation, she said, German men would have to accept wives on the new partnership basis.

Is this demotion the result of the eclipse of militarism in Japan and Germany? Perhaps. Yet the fact is that the new nature of war causes defense and even offense to rely more and more on women's partnership. The masculine despot is hard put nowadays to find a stable throne anywhere.

PRINTS

Never paint trees, unless each painted leaf
Strikes with a harder pattern on the mind
Than real trees make, that clatter their bright hands
In the new wind,
Nor write of love, unless the blackened trail
That spills across the pages of a book
Burns deeper on the heart than what is said
In one white look.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

"Sex Crime"

In your fine February 20 editorial on the advisability of providing closed hearings for children testifying in sex crime cases, you state that one good result might be that more minor sex crimes would be reported, thus making it possible for offenders to be picked up while their crimes are still minor, and before they progress to the point of doing some act of violence to a child.

But you don't mention the fact that sex offenders are picked up and released again time and time again with only brief prison terms and no psychiatric treatment given them while they are in prison. We have a good law here, the Miller Act, but parents who are concerned about the prevalence of sex crimes against children have only to read the court reports to see that it (the Miller Act) is not being invoked in cases where it's clearly called for.

For instance, in a recent account of the sentencing of a man for taking indecent liberties with children you reported that Judge Holtzoff had given him the maximum prison term of 3 to 10 years, commenting that he had a record dating back to 1932 for similar offenses. Does Judge Holtzoff, or does anyone, imagine that after 18 years of molesting children, the man is going to come out of prison 3 or even 10 years hence a reformed character? He could have been sentenced under the Miller Act to an indefinite period of confinement with psychiatric care, which would have insured that he wouldn't be turned loose until there was good reason to believe that he was no longer dangerous to children.

Error On Hormones

Your edition of February 23 carried a story concerning the effects of sex hormones on chickens. The article contained several misquotations and incorrect statements. First, the headline was in error because the injection of sex hormones will not change the sex of the bird. Second, roosters injected with female sex hormones do not lay eggs nor look for places to lay them, as I'm quoted as saying. Third, the hormones used in poultry production are not "removed from the hen," but rather are of a synthetic origin. Fourth, treatment with sex hormones will not cause an "increase in the amount of white meat."

Likewise, the statement "Iowa's Wingless Chicken was just a passing fancy of the poultry farmer . . . etc.", is not my statement.

Your future attention to having your writers check such stories with the source will be appreciated.

"Gyrene"

In his letter of February 17 Mr. Arthur E. Brown states that he has been told that the term "gyrene" is a combination of "GI" and "Marine," and is a term of derision. Mr. Brown and his informants are in error.

To begin with, the old Army man didn't refer to himself as a "GI." The term was not used to indicate the individual soldier until the draft or even later. I make this point because the term "gyrene" has been in use by sailors and even Marines themselves for a number of years—long before "GI" came to mean a soldier. It follows that "gyrene" could not be a derivation of "Marine" and a term which then referred to Government equipment.

Secondly, no marine or sailor with more than a couple of weeks service uses the term "GI" at all. In the naval service it's "regulation"—a word which has the same meaning.

"Gyrene," to my knowledge, is not a derisive term, unless preceded by sundry uncomplimentary adjectives. Any time Mr. Brown really believes the Marines have no real status, or are, in his words, half castes, I refer him to one of the factual histories of the Pacific war, such as the book The Old Breed. Those of us who were there know who won it. HUGH COMPTON.

Meters for Taxis

I suppose one who's lived in Washington a number of years gets used to the zone system of taxicab rates. I must be below par because, after living here many years, I still can't understand the how and why of the zone system. I simply pay what I'm told.

Which makes me wonder about the thousands of visitors who come here every day, many of whom use taxicabs. Unless they happen to be master geographers who helped L'Enfant lay out this city, these visitors probably have less idea than I about what the cabbie will charge.

Why is it that Washington, alone among the larger cities I've visited, has no meters on cabs? Even though we might not like its clicking, at least we'd know what the ride was costing and that it's in keeping with the standards fixed by whatever agency controls the cabs.

Air Freight

There has been a great deal of discussion of the pros and cons of Government aid to commercial aviation, and too often the matter of aviation aids is tied in with the purely operation phase. It is perfectly proper for the Government to provide assistance to airports, airway lighting, etc. This is in line with the billions of dollars that have been spent on rivers and harbors.

The granting of subsidies to airplane operations in the guise of excessive postal rates to make up for losses of passenger traffic should be abolished. In the early days of commercial aviation, some subsidies were rather necessary, but that day has long since passed.

It is the transport of freight which pays the profits not only on railroads but on steamship lines. The aviation operating companies disregard to a large extent the transport of commodities, and as a result their planes make their trips with half a load. The writer does not intend to argue that the fast transport plane is suitable for transport of commodities, as the operation costs are too high. For transport of commodities, slower speeds and heavier carrying capacity must be the governing factors. Such planes can operate from comparatively small fields.

A study of the operating costs of the aviation companies shows a total disregard of costs, as they contemplate making up any reckless spending, from mail subsidies. As a matter of fact, air transport lines devoted principally to the transport of commodities can be operated much more profitably than the lines devoted almost solely to passenger transport.

East Capitol Street Bridge

This letter is prompted by the news item in your issue of February 17 saying that the Commissioners were about to ask congressional authority to build a bridge across the Anacostia River in line of East Capitol st.

I think The Washington Post has done a good job in reporting the battle of the bridges. My thought, however, is that there are four and not two factors in the bridge problem. The Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission are the first two. The third factor is an elaborately printed study entitled Anacostia River Bridges—Present and Future, prepared by the District of Columbia Department of Highways, with editorial assistance and maps given by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads.

This elaborate study, made public August 1, 1949, recommends that the proposed bridge be built in line with East Capitol st. The Commissioners approved it in toto and forwarded it to the NCPPC.

This study or argument, largely technical and theoretical, is of great length and cannot be reviewed here. That the authors were not quite certain of their ground is fully evidenced, I think, by their "justification," to use an appropriation hearing term, which is found in the last paragraph on page 34. It reads as follows: "These items summarize the advantages to be derived from the East Capitol st. bridge as proposed and most accurately fulfill the demands dictated by the Washington metropolitan area transportation study."

By paraphrasing, its meaning perhaps becomes more clear: These items summarize the demands dictated by the Washing-Metropolitan Area Transportation Study. (Note: I am told that this study is not yet completed.) Addenda December 12, 1949: "The results of the 1948 transportation survey clearly indicated that a bridge at East Capitol st. would be of greater value and service to a greater number of people both today and in the future. The District of Columbia has never before been in possession of traffic information that provided a definite pattern for guiding its Highway Department in their selection of proper traffic routes. Since these data are now available, we must make our recommendations based on the facts thus revealed."

I am told by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads that this study was made by three men, one reprenting the State of Maryland, one the State of Virginia, and one the District of Columbia. I think it pertinent to ask who were the "dictators" that so influenced our Highway Department in making their report on the Anacostia River bridges—present and future.

The fourth factor is the District taxpayer; the bridge wherever it may be built, lies wholly within the District of Columbia and its entire cost is borne by the District taxpayer.

That a bridge in line with Massachusetts ave. is not a new idea is evidence by the drawings of a plan for a steel bridge made by the Secretary of War, Lieutenant Colonel Allen, engineer, as directed by an act of Congress February 17, 1897. My recollection is that the estimated cost of this bridge, including approaches, was about $434,000.

I believe that it is generally conceded that a bridge in line with Massachusetts ave. can be built in about half the time and at about half the cost of the proposed East Capitol st. bridge. Which bridge will better serve the public is a disputed question.

Matter of Fact

"Me Too" In Britain

LONDON.—The remarkable achievement of the British Conservative Party is what stands out in the election here. Only five years ago, Britain entered a period of social change of unprecedented depth and extension. There were many Conservatives who then feared, and there were many Laborites who then hoped, that the old political pattern would be shattered forever.

Instead, the old pattern has reasserted itself in a way that has surprised both parties. The Conservatives have already scored an extraordinary comeback. The Labor government's Parliamentary majority is so narrow that most observers expect another general election within 12 months. In that election, if it is held, it is quite possible that the final disappearance of the Liberals will give outright victory to the Conservatives.

In a practical sense, this is the outcome that all the most long-headed Tory leaders always desired. Devaluation of sterling has been so successful that the Exchequer is positively embarrassed by the increase in its hard assets reserves. Yet the final British financial crisis is probably yet to come. The wiser Tories naturally prefer the chickens to come home to roost at the end of Labor's administration rather than at the beginning of their own.

IN AMERICAN EYES, meanwhile, the big question posed by the British election is how the Conservatives did it. After all, our own period of social change began nearly eighteen years ago. All the innovations of the New Deal and the war and the Fair Deal have been far less radical and far-reaching than those that have been made here. Yet the Republicans are still wandering in the political wilderness, with rather darker prospects, if anything, than in the New Deal's middle course.

The answer clearly lies in an entirely different attitude toward the political process, which is the real mark of the British Tory Party. In brief, every Tory chieftain from Lord Salisbury to R. A. Butler, from Anthony Eden to Oliver Lyttelton, is more or less committed to the principle of "me too."

In the whole Tory shadow cabinet, only Winston Churchill has ever objected to following this political rule. With the exception of Lord Salisbury and one or two others, the Tory leaders, however senior and however eminent, tend to cower when Churchill roars. Yet whenever Churchill has shown the slightest tendency to return to his tactics of the 1945 election, he has been repressed by the united opposition of his colleagues.

The platform the Conservatives ran on can be simply summarized. It was: "We believe in everything Labor has done except nationalization. We can do it better. And although we are not going to nationalize any new industries, we are not going to de-nationalize either."

This platform was roughed in as early as two years after the 1945 general election, in the first Conservative program prepared by R. A. Butler. Since then, the obvious mistakes to which governments in power always become committed—as for example certain obviously extravagant and impractical aspects of the health program—have been energetically attacked. But the basic Tory emphasis has always been upon preserving the gains made under the Labor regime.

FROM WHAT has happened here, indeed, a kind of classical strategy for Conservatives quite clearly emerges. The cause of great periods of social change is always rising discontent with their share of the national product among large groups of the population. The aim of the ensuing changes is always to correct the distribution of the available cakes and ale, so that the majority will be satisfied.

Once the majority has been satisfied, however, the way is open for the Conservative Party—the party opposing change—to come to power again. But this is only possible when the Conservative leaders frankly and convincingly accept the changes already made. Otherwise those population groups that have benefited from the changes will continue to vote with the Left, in order to protect their gains from a party they regard as committed to putting the clock back.

In short, facing irreversible political facts, and being ready to say "me too" when necessary, is the essence of successful conservatism.

After watching this election, the observer inevitably thinks about the howls of nostalgia for Warren G. Harding from the dominant Republican reactionaries in Congress, or about Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's farm speeches in 1948, which left every farmer wondering whether the whole farm benefit program was to be cast into the discard. No doubt these same Republicans are now jubilating over a "trend to the right." No doubt also, in the very next breath, they will be denouncing the very political tactics that have provoked this trend in Britain.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On The British Elections

ON THE FACE of the returns it looks very much as if the British election had opened up more questions than it settled.

Lippmann

Though the present government, or something very like it, will continue in office, its expectation of life cannot be long. Where it had a majority of 160 seats it now has a majority of 9 over the combined opposition. Without a majority of 80 seats, there is no safe working majority—that is to say, no reasonable certainty that the Attlee-Bevin-Morrison-Cripps leadership and management could carry through all their controversial measures over a period of years.

The chances then are that there will be another general election before the five-year term of this new Parliament expires.

THE FALLING off of the Labor majority does not, I should imagine, indicate anything like so great a change in the views of the voters. The issues, as they were drawn by the Conservatives, were not sharp, and there is no reason to read the results as a popular uprising against the welfare state, or even against a marked amount of socialized control of the financial and economic system. British Conservatives as a whole are, to be sure, more to the Right in their private views than they were in their public campaign. But by and large even their private views are, as compared with most of our own old guard Republicans and Southern Democrats, considerably to the left of Center.

The returns do, however, indicate a very serious loss of power by the old Labor Party leaders. With so small a majority, the relative importance of the left wing of the Labor Party, and of Mr. Aneurin Bevan, will, one may suppose, be greatly enhanced.

MUCH may depend, therefore, on how the younger and more radical wing of the Labor Party exercises its new power. And it would appear to have the power to keep the government in office or to force another election. Mr. Attlee and Mr. Bevin will no longer have sure and undisputed control, it would seem, of the party which governs Great Britain. If that is so, it will be very interesting to see whether the right wing of labor comes to terms with the left wing or in some national crises seeks a coalition with the leftward elements of the Conservative and Labor parties.

All this is, of course, speculation but what is, I think, certain and at the bottom of it all is that the election has shaken the existing leadership of the Labor Party, and has presented Mr. Attlee with problems of party discipline which he did not have to think about when he had a majority of 160 seats.

THERE will be some but not, I expect, many Conservatives who wish they had done a little better and had "won." As a matter of fact, as a party the outcome could hardly have been more neatly convenient to them.

The Labor Party is still compelled to bear the responsibility of government in the period, now approaching, when Marshall aid will end and the critical test will have to be met. In that period it will be more comfortable and politically more profitable to be in the opposition. At the same time the Labor majority is almost certainly too small to drive through measures of the kind that the Conservatives really are opposed to.

There is, therefore, a good prospect that in the interval, which may not be long before the next election, Labor will have all the difficulties of the actual situation and the Conservatives all the party advantages of being in the opposition.

THE OUTCOME is, as respects the rest of the world, uncertain and negative. There is as yet no government in Britain with a clear and final mandate. And therefore the time is not yet in sight when Britain will speak again with authority and confidence in the affairs of the world. This is one of the great deficiencies of the era in which we live, that Britain does not play the great role which every plan for the postwar era assumed that she could and would play.

In the end, no doubt, she will play her role again. But that time, it appears, is not yet.

Red Cross Flags Herald Annual Drive for Funds

Red Cross flags will fly over stores, from street poles and other prominent places today.

Although March has been designated as Red Cross Month, the flags will be displayed until Monday, April 3.

Mrs. P. J. Altizer, chairman, arranged for distribution of the 4500 flags throughout the Dstrict area.

The first report luncheon for the drive has been set for Friday, March 3, in the Hall of Flags at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building.

Daniel W. Bell is general chairman of the campaign for $1,039,000 for the area embracing the District, Alexandria and Arlington, Prince Georges, Montgomery and Fairfax Counties.

Personnel Expert Admits 1000 Thefts

Detroit, Feb. 26 (AP).—A man who by day was a well-dressed, $4500 factory personnel expert but who admitted, officers said, he was a burglar at night was held by police today.

Detectives said Leslie Christopher Potter, 40, casually estimated that he looted 1000 Detroit homes of $80,000 in valuables and $15,000 in cash over a seven-year period. They said they would ask a burglary warrant Monday.

Potter called burglary his avocation, police said.

Detectives quoted him as saying he spent money as he got it, "mostly on presents for some 500 friends."

order to become independent of American aid. Morrison is reported to have shunted the idea aside because he and other cabinet ministers did not wish to risk offending Americans.

The attack on Bevin may be more serious.

He is accused of making the top flop of the campaign in his reply to Winston Churchill's call for H-bomb talks with Russia. The leftists say his reply cost Labor many votes. They long have asserted his policies are leading to war with Russia. They begrudge the $2,240,000,000 annual defense bill, which they say is more than Britain can afford to buttress Bevin's alleged blunders around the globe.

Described as the "man with a thousand headaches," Attlee was at his country home of Chequers today thinking the problem over. Before the election, he was reported ready to set up a cabinet more to the left by promoting Bevin, Shinwell and some other left wingers.

The outcome of at least two more parliamentary battles should become known Monday. They are the remote counties of Argyll and Inverness in Scotland. It is not certain when the ballots will be counted from a third Scottish constituency in the Orkney and Shetland Islands.

In the Moss side division of Manchester the election has been postponed until March 9 because of the death of the Conservative candidate.

workable international agreement which will guarantee that such things will not be used—either on us or on anybody else.

The acting AEC chairman's attitude was further clarified in response to a question by Representative O'Hara based on suggestions by public figures in the United States and Britain for "new high-level talks with Russia on atomic energy controls."

"Views of a Citizen"

"My views on international questions," Pike explained, "are those of a citizen rather than those of a commissioner on the Atomic Energy Commission, because, as you probably remember, we are in charge of the domestic program.

"The State Department, in general, is in charge of our international relations. I don't—as a citizen—I don't feel very happy about this whole international situation, and, as a citizen, I, of course, will go for anything that has any fair promise of alleviating or clearing up these clouds, these troublous things that we look forward to.

"Frankly, I think that the State Department and our grand representatives on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission are people of great character and greater good will and know so much more about it than I that I hardly feel like giving them suggestions."

to work in a flax mill at the age of 11, when his father died. Then he became a coal miner.

Lauder always said the turning point in his life was his marriage at the age of 20 to Annie Vallance. His young wife played the piano and they started giving concerts at small entertainment halls in Scotland.

He was knighted in 1919 by the late King George V for his services in singing to empire troops in the trenches in France. Then success followed success. In the 1920s and '30s he became a wealthy man but never lost the common touch.

He never ceased grieving at the death of his wife in 1927. His only son, Capt. John Lauder, was killed in the 1914-18 war.

Sir Harry encouraged stories about his Scotch parsimony. Friends who gave him cigars found he had exchanged them at his tobacconist for his favorite tobacco. In Glasgow he once tipped a porter twopence because he said "He'll call me all the names in creation and everybody will be talking for weeks." Nevertheless, his friends said he was always ready to help the unfortunate, even strangers.

and Brig. Gen. Charles R. Fox of West Virginia, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee, also re-elected, included Maj. Gen. Curtis D. O'Sullivan of California, Maj. Gen. James S. Saliba of Alabama and Brig. Gen. George C. Moran of Michigan.

Among resolutions adopted were these:

1. To "assist the chief of the National Guard Bureau in having the United States Air Force and the Bureau of the Budget raise the man-year authorization from 5814 to 7143" for air technicians assigned to Guard installations.

2. Take steps to increase Federal participation in the cost of maintaining Guard services and installations from the present variable amounts to 75 percent of cost.

3. To request the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee to arrange early hearings on the Tydings bill to provide funds for construction and rehabilitation of armories and other structures for reserve components.

4. Opposing payment of Guard personnel by mail instead of in armories at drill time. It was felt the recent decision to pay by mail would remove an incentive to report for drill as well as complicate the work of keeping local records.

put the Hoover Report recommendations into effect "speedily."

Straight said the proposals "will give the veterans a better break . . . will slash red tape and the 'hurry-up-and-wait' of the VA."

AVC, Straight continued, "denounces the American Legion, and other veterans' groups, for selling out the real interest of the veteran, and as a veterans' organization (AVC) is heartily ashamed of the campaign of lies, distortions and vilification they are waging against the members of the Hoover Commission and their recommendations."

Destruction Seen

George N. Craig, American Legion National Commander, in a speech here February 7, charged that the commission is trying to "destroy and dismember" the VA and discredit the veteran.

National AVC Chairman Straight called this "absurd."

"If the recommendations are put into effect," Straight asserted, "the VA will have annual appropriations of five-billion-dollars or more . . . The fact is that the recommendations leave all essential matters concerning the veteran under VA control."

The Planning Committee adopted a resolution calling for extension of Federal rent control. It reaffirmed its stand—at the request of District of Columbia membership—backing home rule and suffrage for Washington.

fort to delay the contempt trial while the negotiators continued their intensified bargaining talks.

The Sunday meeting was called without the presence of Lewis, head of the miners, who was called to Springfield, Ill., by the death of a brother.

Instead of the 4-man committees which have represented the operators and the miners for the last week, Cole said that they were now narrowing the discussions to one man on each side.

These were Union Secretary-Treasurer John Owens and Harvey Cartwright, who has been chairman of the joint conferences up to now. Cartwright represents the Indiana coal operators, but as chairman of the joint conference he had previously taken no direct part in the negotiations.

His talks with Owens, brought about under pressure from Cole and Conciliation Director Cyrus S. Ching, indicated a departure from the tactics which have been followed for the past week.

Until Sunday, George H. Love had been the chief negotiator for the operators.

Owens and Cartwright conferred for two hours. Then Cole announced a dinner recess.

It was known that the union negotiators were in telephonic communication with Lewis at his family home in Springfield.

Today's trial is to determine whether the 372,000 soft coal diggers committed contempt of court by refusing to return to work under terms of a court order issues by Federal District Judge Richmond B. Keech.

There was no indication of impending presidential action.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said in a broadcast that he has been told the two sides were pretty close together and "it might be that very shortly the whole thing will be settled."

Government seizure of the mines, which has been advanced as a means of ending the strike, may not be feasible, Tydings indicated. If the properties were taken over and the men refused to go back to work, "where are you then?" the Senator asked.

President Truman has scorned seizure, although this method was successfully invoked in an earlier coal strike.

the boat began to leak and landed him on the south Johore coast in Malaya. He made his way to Singapore Island by the causeway.

He was arrested as he started to enter the house of a friend on River Valley road. He put up no resistance. His wife was not with him, but she is reported also to be in Singapore.

The arrest of Westerling here could present the new Indonesian government with a ticklish dilemma. The Indonesian press has accused the government of handling Westerling in a gingerly manner.

If an investigation now developed that Westerling actually was harbored by the Dutch army and smuggled out of the country by the Dutch navy the scandal might result in a dangerous rift of relations between the Indonesian government and the Dutch.

Cab Driver Trails Mother to Return Her Lost Wallet

An Arlington cab driver's honesty and initiative returned a Sunday school teacher's lost wallet yesterday, and enabled three children to enjoy a special movie treat in Washington.

George E. Wilkins, 1520 Roosevelt st. N., Arlington, Va., saw the teacher drop the wallet as she entered her car at Community Methodist Church, Key blvd., and Bryan st., Arlington. Before he could stop her, she drove away.

He found identification inside the wallet, followed Mrs. Dorothy Spinks, to her home at 1624 Colonial terr. The $5 in the wallet was intended to send her two children and a cousin to see "Cinderella." All Wilkins would accept was cab fare for the run.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., FEB. 26.—Joe Engel, who says he cares not who writes the Nation's songs as long as he can stay on Clark Griffith's expense account, is in nearby Winter Garden preparing a whopper for the old gentleman.

Engel has just wound up one baseball school, and is starting another aimed at unearthing some talent for the Nats and their farm team subsidiaries. He is not certain he has come up with anything sensational yet, except in the fiscal department.

POVICH

"This is costing Mr. Griffith a beautiful sum," says Engel. "If I don't get fired for this, or even if I do, it will be a monument to my career as the chief spender of Mr. Griffith's money. He's picking up the check for the feeding of 140 healthy kids, and look at this—"

He waved his arms grandiloquently at the lush landscaping dotted with acres of orange groves. "They come with the joint," he said. "Think of all the dough we save on fresh juice. If we don't come up with that second baseman Griff wants, it won't be a total loss. We'll have a great crop of Valencias going for us."

ENGEL'S WINTER GARDEN plant where his Chattanooga Lookouts train does indeed put the Washington team's Tinker Field installations to shame. The parent club is operating in a mangy, goat-ridden camp compared to the first-cabin appointments of Engel's minor leaguers. If Buck Newsom, now with Chattanooga, succeeds in catching on with the Nats, he would he stepping down in class.

Newsom hasn't signed his 1950 Chattanooga contract yet. He is in deep pain about it, in fact. The big pitcher who once made $40,000 a year with the Detroit Tigers, got a contract from Engel the other day, and is on the point of citing Joe to the postal authorities for sending obscene matter through the mails.

"I wish I had been around when Newsom got his first look at that contract," Engel chuckled. "I offered him only $400 a month. That's less than $3000 for the season. I wouldn't blame him for throwing it right in the fire, but you always have to have that kind of a starting point with Bobo. I promised myself all winter, I'd beat him to the punch."

BUT ENGEL AGREES that Newsom will probably wind up as the highest-paid player in the Southern Association. "He pitched great ball for us last year when he won those 17 games. With any luck, he'd have won 25. He lost a lot of brutal ones, 2-1 and 1-0. He actually got into shape, took off 30 pounds and was good enough to win in the majors."

To get full performance out of Bobo, Engel had to use a little applied psychology, though, he says. "I had to con him a bit. One day I told him there were eight big league scouts in the stands looking him over, but I added they were saying he couldn't go the distance.

"Ginme that ball and I'll show 'em," Bobo said. And he really did. He went all the way to beat Nashville, the heaviest-hitting club in the league, 2-1, and then demanded I let him pitch the second game of the doubleheader, too. He went out and beat 'em again, 3-2. I didn't tell him the only scout in the stands was myself, but he wangled a bonus out of me."

ENGEL'S STATUS with the Washington organization is something special. Ossie Bluege is the director of the club's farm system, but Engel is responsible only to Griffith. "I don't know why, but I'm Griffiths pet, I guess," says Engel. "Maybe it's from the old days when I was pitching for him and we were roommates. Maybe it was because I didn't squawk the time Griff said 'The club is going so bad, let's both of us take salary cuts."

The bizarre dealings of Engel are famous, you know. He once traded a shortstop for a Thanksgiving turkey. He bought a pitcher for the price of a newspaper subscription on another occasion. When he bought Ossie Bluege from the Peoria club back in 1920, it was a special sort of a deal, he recalled today.

"The outfit that ran the Peoria club also ran some of the town's undercover activities. They said they'd sell me Bluege and Chuck Dressen for $2000 and throw in a case of Hiram Walker whisky. Those were prohibition days, you know. I told 'em it was a deal, but they had to show their good faith by delivering the whisky first. They did!"

Bucky Harris Is Worried Over Lack Of Pitchers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26.—Bucky Harris, the old realist who has come back to manage the Washington club for the third time, is permitting himself no delusions about the Nats' pitching staff. He doesn't like it.

With the start of the training season only two days distant, Harris is muttering gloomily about the lack of the kind of pitchers he'd like to see on his team. "We'll need plenty of luck," he said today.

His pitching problem has taken precedence over everything else that may be wrong with the Nats. Harris has been beseeching owner Clark Griffith to come up with something lustier in the pitching department, either by purchase or trade, before the season opens.

Scarborough Top Man

"Badly as we need the right kind of a second baseman, we need pitching more," said Harris. "Look over our list. Ray Scarborough is the only solid man on it. We're gambling too heavily on comebacks by other veterans and hoping in too many cases, perhaps, that our rookies will come through."

Such as Sid Hudson and Joe Haynes, both of them flops last season, do not intrigue Harris. He is sharing the high optimism among the Nats' bosses that young Dick Weik will blossom as a big winner, but he wonders how much reliance is to be placed on his other top rookies, Lloyd Hittle and Steve Nagy.

"We're so thin in our pitching I'd be lying if I said I wasn't worried," declared Harris. "You're darn right I'm worried, and I don't like the situation. A club counts itself lucky if one rookie pitcher comes through in a season. We don't have any right to hope for more than that."

Harris is still hopeful that Griffith can make a deal that would bring Dizzy Trout from the Tigers. "Trout says he's unhappy because they won't let him start games in Detroit. If I had him on my club, there'd be no argument about it. He'd be a regular starter."

THE NATS' hotel headquarters are beginning to fill with athletes. Sam Mele, who has been promised a regular outfield post, is the latest arrival . . . Mele wintered in Boston and reports no further trouble with his aching back which kept him out of many a game last season . . . He's pleased, too, about the shorter left field in Griffith Stadium and says "it'll be nicer to shoot at." . . . Players who bring their families to Orlando have been forewarned they'll get no rent allowance if they live outside the hotel, only meal money . . . They kicked up a fuss about it last year, but got no concessions . . . Ray Scarborough will confer with Griffith tomorrow on salary terms and if he doesn't sign his contract it will be an upset . . . Among Harris' pitching plans will be an attempt to make a starting pitcher out of Dick Welteroth who was overworked in relief roles last season . . . Among Buck Newsom's pitching plans is an attempt to sell himself to the Nats again, but unless Bucky Harris is truly desperate it won't happen.

GW Loses Toss, Plays Wake Forest

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington yesterday lost a flip of a coin and was placed in the tougher of the two brackets in the Southern Conference basketball tournament which opens Thursday in Durham.

The coin toss at Durham was between G. W. and William and Mary which finished their regular season in a tie for second place.

By winnings, W. & M. won second seeding and a comparatively easier road to the finals.

G. W. was placed in the same bracket with North Carolina State, which is heavily favored to retain its championship.

The Colonials meet Wake Forest Thursday afternoon in a quarter-finals match. If they win, the Colonials will play the North Carolina State—Virginia Tech victor in a Friday night semi-final game.

G. W. beat Wake Forest, 83-67, only last Saturday and figures to beat the Deacons again.

But it's that semifinal game which is the toughie. Two of the Colonials' four conference defeats were inflicted by N. C. State and Virginia Tech.

State knocked off G. W. in last year's tournament finals, and made that victory stick in this season's opener by trimming the Colonials again, 74-52, at Raleigh.

The Wolfpack holds victories over all seven other contestants of the tourney this season and is the ninth-ranking team in the Nation, according to the Associated Press poll.

Tourney Pairings

Here are the pairings for the first round of the Southern Conference basketball tournament which opens Thursday in Durham:

Thursday—
2:15—South Carolina vs. Duke.
4:00—Wake Forest vs. G. Washington.
7:30—N. C. State vs. Virginia Tech.
9:00—North Carolina vs. W. & M.
The second and third game winners will meet Friday night at 7:30 in one semifinal game, with the other following at 9. Finals are set for 8 p. m. Saturday.

Middlecoff's 277 Wins at Houston; Cooper Second, 3 Strokes Back

WHO HIT ME?—From the way things look here it appears Referee Harry Van Linder was the guy who clubbed Lightweight Clint McDade to the canvas, but it wasn't. George Luce did it in the third round of an amateur fight at Kalamazoo, Mich., and Referee Van Linder is merely stepping in to halt the bout with Luce having an arm around the referee's shoulder.

Jim Demaret Rallies to Finish Third

Houston, Feb. 26 (AP).—Cary Middlecoff won the fourth annual Houston Open today with a 72-hole score of 277.

He was 3 strokes ahead of Pete Cooper, Vedra, Fla., and 11 under par for the 6725-yard Brae Burn Country Club course.

It was the first tournament victory for the National Open champion from Ormond Beach, Fla., since he took first place at Reading, Pa., last year and it earned him $2000

Has 71 on Final Round

Middlecoff finished today with a 1-under 71 and placed this beside previous rounds of 71, 66 and 69.

He made the turn today four strokes ahead of the field but Cooper, playing two threesomes ahead, began breathing down the former Memphis dentist's neck on the back nine.

Middlecoff had just finished the fourteenth and was one under par for the day as Cooper posted his 69 for a 280.

That left the handsome Middlecoff needing even par on the final four to win at 279.

He went to work immediately and danced a merry jig when he sank a 30-foot putt on the fifteenth green for a 1-under three.

Birdies Last Hole

Sixteen and seventeen were taken at par and Middlecoff found his second shot on 18 stopping only 25 feet from the cup.

On the final stroke of the tournament he sank his putt for a one-under 3 birdie.

Cooper took $1400 as the second place winner.

Jimmy Demaret, former Brae Burn pro, rallied in the tournament's final two rounds to zoom into third place at 283 for $1000. He had trailed badly at the halfway mark.

Scores zoomed today as Brae Burn pro Milton Demaret, brother of Jimmy, had the cups relocated for the final round. He placed them on the most difficult roll or slope each green would offer.

Only Cooper broke 70, a feat that had been accomplished 22 times during the first three rounds.

Middlecoff had predicted two days ago it would take a 276 to win. His 277 matched that of Bobby Locke, the 1947 winner.

NCAA Restores B.C. But Not Terps

C. U. Game Key To American's Playoff Spot

By The Associated Press

American University, which clinched the regular season championship of the Mason-Dixon Basketball conference Saturday night, will be the last of the seeded teams to know its opening game opponent in the conference tournament.

Pairings announced yesterday by Conference Commissioner Paul Menton list American's foe in the opening round as Baltimore University or Catholic University.

The hitch is that Baltimore now holds eighth place in the league with a final record of seven wins and nine losses against Mason-Dixon competition, but Catholic still can tie things up and force a playoff.

Currently holders of a six-and-nine slate, the Cardinals play their final game tonight, entertaining Towson.

Menton said a victory for Catholic would mean a playoff between the Washingtonians and Baltimore to see who will face American U. on Thursday night. The showdown contest would be played Tuesday or Wednesday on a neutral court, the commissioner said.

The tourney will run Thursday through Saturday at Loyola, with one loss eliminating a team.

Sharing the upper bracket in the tournament will be Washington College, seeded No. 4 with 11 victories in 16 conference games. The Shoremen meet Roanoke (5-5) Thursday night.

Loyola, second place, finisher in the regular season with 11-2, meets Bridgewater (9-5), and Hampden-Sydney, which wound up third with 9-4, takes on Towson.

Jim Cain, Army Star, Breaks Ankle At IC4A Games

West Point, Feb. 25 (AP).—Jim Cain, swift Army halfback, broke his ankle in two places in last night's ice games at Madison Square Garden.

Cain, lead-off man of the Army mile relay team, fell during the second turn fo his lap and broke his left leg, two inches and four inches above the ankle. He was removed to Poly Clinic Hospital and returned to the fortress on the Hudson today.

Caps Snap Losing Streak

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 26.—Player-Coach Bob Feerick led the Washington Caps to an 81-78 victory over the Fort Wayne Pistons tonight, enabling the visitors to snap a fourgame losing streak.

Entering the game for the first time in the last period, Feerick tossed in a long push shot with two minutes to play to tie the score at 77-all, and seconds later followed with the basket that gave the Caps the lead they held the rest of the way.

Until Feerick came in to steer the Caps to their close victory, Forward Dick O'Keefe was pretty much of a one-man show against the home team. Before fouling out in the last quarter, O'Keefe had tossed in 24 points on 11 baskets and two free throws to lead both teams in scoring.

The Pistons rallied to gain a 22-22 tie at the end of the first quarter, but by halftime they held a 42-35 advantage. With Freddie Scolari, who got 16 points, getting hot in the third quarter, the Caps had narrowed their deficit to 3 points, trailing, 65-62, as the final 12-minute period started.

Council Seeks Suggestions For Changes in Sanity Code

By The Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Boston College was restored to the good graces of the National Collegiate Athletic Association today, but Maryland and four other purity code violators remained in the doghouse.

At the same time, the NCAA's 17-man council agreed to "receive suggestions for the revision of the regulation (purity code) to make it more equitable and better adapted to the diversified membership of the association."

A three-man committee, to be named later, will make an inquiry, proposing changes.

Results of the probe are to be presented to the council before September 1. Council members, representing every section of the country, will canvass their areas for recommendations regarding revisions; each member school of the NCAA will submit information it feels pertinent to the study; all conference commissioners or representatives will eventually meet to discuss athletic practices, situations and the rules of their particular areas.

From all this, the council hopes will come a workable new or revised sanity code to be presented at the annual NCAA parley in 1951. The investigators are to report their findings to the council in August.

The decision to study changes in the purity code regulation was a triumph for Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland University president who led the successful campaign against expulsion of non-complying schools last month.

Hugh C. Willett of Southern California, NCAA president, said he had "every reason to hope that code violators will be in compliance in the near future."

The compliance committee, headed by Clarence P. Houston of Tufts, will meet in Savannah, Ga., March 2-4, to study reported violations. A list of probably 25 schools will be reviewed.

The committee recently gave its okay to Boston College which was cited along with The Citadel, Maryland, Virginia, Virginia Tech, Villanova and Virginia Military Institute, as violators. Clearance by the all-powerful council was a formality. The Citadel has resigned from the NCAA, while the others are still viewed in poor standing and subject to schedule boycotts and participation in NCAA sponsored meets.

As soon as an institution has been certified by the compliance committee as being in good standing, it will become immediately eligible for meets and tournaments. This action by the council overrides the previous provision which rules such ineligibility for the calendar year.

Thus, Villanova, with a good basketball team this season, can still be eligible for an NCAA tourney bid if it is promptly cleared by the compliance committee.

Syracuse Wins, Clinches Title

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 26 (AP).—The Syracuse Nationals swept their two-game National Basketball Association series with the Chicago Stags by scoring a 73-64 victory tonight before 5035 fans who braved a heavy snow storm.

In winning, the Nats clinched the Eastern Division championship of the National Basketball Association. They now have won 44 and lost 9.

Adolf Schayes led the Nats with 24 points including 10 of 11 from the foul line.

Bosox Ship Kramer to Giants, Jack Says He Was 'Railroaded'

* * * * * *

McCarthy Must Dislike Me, Kramer Says

New Orleans, Feb. 26 (U.P.).—Pitcher Jack Kramer, who was picked up by the New York Giants on waivers, said today he had been "railroaded" out of the American League by Boston Red Sox Manager Joe McCarthy.

"I was very much surprised to find out that the Red Sox had let McCarthy railroad me out of the American League," Kramer said.

"McCarthy just must have taken a dislike to me. My arm is in good shape now, and I know I could have helped the club. I just don't understand how they would let McCarthy do this to me."

Boston, Feb. 26. (AP)—The outright sale of Red Sox Pitcher Jack Kramer to the New York Giants in the National League for a figure "above the waiver price" was announced today by Joe Cronin, general manager of the American League club.

Cronin refused to divulge the exact figure the Giants paid for the 6-foot righthander who hails from New Orleans, La.

He would say only that there was "nothing conditional about the sale" and that the price was "in excess of the waiver figure."

Hindered by an arm ailment all last season, Kramer had a record of six wins and eight losses. As a result of his poor showing, he was given the maximum 25 percent pay cut at which he balked.

His salary was reputed to be about $27,500 with the Sox last year.

Kramer's best season was in 1948 when he compiled an 18-5 record for a .783 percentage.

"The deal for Kramer went through some time ago," Cronin said, "but we withheld announcement until he signed his 1950 contract."

Lost to Navy, 58 to 1, in Basketball

Terps Can Point Finger at '17 Team

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MARYLAND'S 1950 basketball team, which lost 18 games and won only seven, was one of the worst in the school's history, but even so it was a distinct improvement over the 1917 Terps' club . . . That one was annihilated by the Naval Academy, 58 to 1, repeating, 58 to 1 . . . The longest winning streak in the history of collegiate athletics will be placed on the line March 29 when the William and Mary College tennis team opens a 14-match schedule. The Virginia netmen have won 74 straight matches . . . The tragic death of Lavern Roach may lead the National Boxing Association executive committee, which meets here in April, to require fighters to wear head harness . . . The execs will also debate a recommendation to increase time between rounds from 1 minute to 1½ minutes . . . When Phil Fox of Brooklyn, who was scheduled to referee Saturday's Caps-Philly game, collapsed in Baltimore Friday night, Arnold Heft, of Washington was asked to fill in for him. Heft did, but he had to take a cast off his left leg to do it. He was injured Thursday night working a game for V. P. I. in Blacksburg, Va. . . . Joe Fitzgerald, Nats bullpen catcher, mourns the retirement of Outfielder Buddy Lewis more than anyone. He and Lewis were inseparable friends and roommates for years . . .

FRIENDS INSIST there's no rift between Bob Ingalls and George Sauer, but it's a fact that Sauer has completed his coaching staff at Baylor while Ingalls is still in Annapolis, unemployed . . . Sauer quit as head football coach at Navy when officials failed to renew the contract of his two assistants, Ingalls and Vic Bradford. The latter, a backfield coach, accompanied Sauer to Baylor . . . Of the 36 students taking a course in footbal theory under Prof. James M. Tatum at Maryland University, only two are football players . . . More than 6000 tickets have already been sold for Wednesday's game between the Caps and Chicago Stags at Raleigh, N. C. . . . While fans there seem to be hot for pro basketball, they are reportedly extremely cool toward contributing to a Bones McKinney Night fund . . . They are miffed because (a) they weren't informed until yesterday that Bones, aformer hero in those parts, injured his hand and may not play and (b) they are not keen over helping to pay for the car which was "awarded" McKinney at his night at Uline Arena two weks ago . . .

BILL DUDLEY, who is expected to be added to the Redskins' payroll today, owes a great deal of his football fame and fortune to the Redskins' 73-0 loss to the Chicago Bears . . . Frank Murray, then Dudley's coach at Virginia, saw the debacle and was so impressed by the Bears' T-formation that he hustled back to Charlottesville, Va., and scrapped his single wing for the T attack . . . As a T-formation halfback, Dudley, already a good football player, became a truly great one, making all-America in 1941 . . . Football, which carries the athletic load at most universities, failed miserably at N. Y. U. last year. It cost the Violets $31,472 for their losing season, but the deficit was somewhat reduced when the basketball team weighed in with a $14,000 profit . . . Emanuel Zalzak, former Maryland U. lacrosse star, is contemplating running for councilman-at-large. Weighing 288, his friends believe him eminently qualified for the position.

Tatum Surprised Terps Aren't Okayed

Jim Tatum, Maryland athletic director, said last night he was surprised that Maryland hadn't been removed from the non-compliance list.

"We are complying with the NCAA code and recently sent the NCAA a letter notifying them of it," he said. "Perhaps the letter wasn't received in time for the Chicago council meeting."

Yvonne Gave Up Music to Be Skater

By Jules Loh

WHEN A FRAIL little kid out of Jackson Heights, New York City, took up ice skating merely as a means to work up an appetite, Charnegie Hall lost a good prospect.

But when Yvonne Claire Sherman decided to forsake the piano, Uncle Sam acquired the first American woman figure skating champion of the world.

Yvonne was a problem child. She wouldn't eat her dinner. Her parents decided on ice skating to whet her appetite. Immediately Yvonne began to eat well, skate well—and miss piano lessons.

That was when she was 5. At the age of 19 she has become not the concert pianist her parents intended, but the odds-on favorite in both the world's championships in London March 6-8, and in the National championships in Washington, March 22-25.

By the time she was 9 Yvonne had become the youngest girl in the country to pass seven of the eight prescribed gold medal figure skating tests.

She was a natural, Yvonne was, but she flopped in competition as she grew into a young lady.

She was afraid to try a double flip when anybody was looking. A double flip being a trick where you jump up in the air and flip twice. She was afraid to do a sit spin—sit on one foot and spin—since she broke a leg doing it back in 1945. She lacked confidence.

A FELLOW named Gustave Lussi shook all that out of her when she showed up in St. Moritz, Switzerland, to represent the United States in pairs competition in the 1948 Olympics. She got there by virtue of her showing in the '47 North American championships in which she finished third.

Yvonne's coach was not able to make the trip.

In desperation Yvonne went to Lussi, coach of champions like Dick Button, Barbara Ann Scott and Gretchen Merrill. Her new coach recognized her natural ability and psychologically dispelled her stage fright by constantly reminding her how good she was.

It worked so well that recently when the two were arguing over a technicality she reminded her boss in no few words that she was National and North American champ—both titles won last year.

Now she can jump like a kangaroo. And flip twice.

De Matha Wins Over Little Hoyas

Gonzaga's Eagles wound up in second place in the Catholic High League by nosing out St. Anthony's, 47-46, in the league's final double header yesterday at Catholic University.

Frankie DeGirolomo's layup on a fast break in the last 20 seconde gave the Eagles their margin of victory. Gonzaga finished with a 5-2 mark in league competition and 16-11 over all.

The lead changed hands eight times and the score was tied six times in the seesaw contest.

Lou Pennini of St. Anthony's was the game's high scorer with 16 points, Gonzaga's Mike Nolan grabbing the runnerup spot with 15.

In the second game, DeMatha finished in third place with a 4-4 mark by downing Georgetown Prep, 51-42. Frank Fuqua was the game's high scorer with 17 points for the victors. Bill Nolan's 13 were best for Georgetown Prep.

Biff Jones After 10th Straight Win Tonight Against Bezon

PAT THOMAS

Jones, Eastern High School product who campaigned unsuccessfully as a featherweight, has "straightened himself out," he says and is enjoying his best success since turning pro four years ago.

The southpawing Biffer is one of four Washington lads on Matchmaker Gabe Menendez's "all-star" card.

Featherweight Pat Thomas, knockout winner over Pat Dimmines in his last local fight, meets Havana's Ray Castillo in another eight; Middleweight Julian Keene, who disposed of Joe Blackwood, comes back against New York's Al Winn in still another eight while Gene Smith, the sensational featherweight "find," fights Jimmy Proctor of New York in a six-rounder.

Melvin Lee and Malcolm Peers, local welters, open the show in a four at 8:45.

Metro Highs Tourney Will Open Tonight

Five league champions and three runnersup, representing the best in local scholastic basketball, are set for the opening of the eighteenth annual Star Metropolitan Tournament tonight at College Park.

First-round games are scheduled for tonight and tomorrow night, the semifinals Thursday and the championship game Friday.

George Washington High of Alexandria is defending champion.

Montgomery Blair, Montgomery County League champion, sporting an 18-3 record, meets Eastern, runnerup in the Interhigh League in tonight's opening game.

Blair rules as the favorite but it's up against the school that has won the tournament the most times—five. Game time is 7:30.

In this evening's second game, St. John's, Catholic High League champ and the best team entered with a 21-4 mark, takes on Washington-Lee of Arlington, runnerup in the Northern Virginia League with a 15-4 record.

Tonight's two winners play each other Thursday night in the first semi-final game.

Tomorrow, the 7:30 contest pits McKinley Tech, Interhigh League titlist with a record of 17 triumphs and three defeats, against Gonzaga's Eagles, runnersup in the Catholic High League with a 16-11 mark.

In Tuesday's nightcap, George Washington High, Northern Virginia League champion boasting a 15-4 record, meets Hyattsville, Prince Georges County titlist, with a 15-3 mark. Tuesday's victors play in the 8:45 semi-final on Thursday.

St. Martin's, Nativity Tie for Girls' Title

St. Martin's and Nativity won their games yesterday at St. Martin's and finished in a tie for the championship of the girls' intermediate division of the Catholic Youth Organization League.

St. Martin's nosed out St. Dominic's, 39-38, and Nativity defeated Blessed Sacrament, 24-22. Playoffs begin next week. In other games, St. Francis Xavier defeated Holy Comforter, 24-19, and St. Jerome's defeated St. Teresa's, 18-16.

The Washington Post,
Dear Sir:

As captain of the Landon School soccer team, I want to comment upon a piece, appearing in the February 23 issue of your paper.

On page fifteen, column four, there is a piece about Landon winning the Interstate Athletic Conference championship which contains some false information. I know that the information is given to you by the schools, and that a Landon student gave you these facts; so I do not hold you responsible.

The article states that Landon has won six straight championships. Last year St. Albans was champion.

Victor Block has been a varsity sub all year; he hasn't played in a J. V. game all year.

Also the article states that Landon has won fifteen straight games. The last game last year was with St. James School resuling in a tie. Of twelve games this year, Landon has tied two, the French Embassy team and Episcopal High.

Lastly, I want to thank you for your feature on our coach, Mr. Prindle, which appeared about a week ago.

Sincerely,
HALLECK A. BUTTS, JR.

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: Here's some lowdown on Charles Town opening next Saturday: Post time for first race 1:30 p. m. Dan Chamblin has the largest stable with 23 horses. Jimmy Baird will come up from Florida to ride for him. Starter Harold Holland has been schooling horses since February 15. Horses have been working since the meeting last December and many were kept tuned up all winter, thanks to the open weather. Pete Allnut is grooming his 3-year-old, Smarty Arty, and expects big things of him. Hagerstown stables will not be available during the Charles Town meeting due to work on the Maryland plant. Horses who wintered at Marlboro and Timonium are being shipped in. No B. & O. race train until coal situation improves, but buses will run from Washington, Baltimore and other points. Five more days before I'll see you on the rail.

BILL.

Citation Has Another Chance to Top Stymie

Coast 'Cap Win Would Net $37,500

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 26 (AP).—There's one more chance this week for the great Citation to become the biggest money-winning horse of all time.

But whether his stable will accept the chance is problematical today. Only Owner Warren Wright and Trainer Jimmy Jones know the answer, if they do.

Santa Anita Park closes its thirteenth winter racing season next Saturday with the $50,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap, at a mile and three-quarters.

It will be worth some $37,500 to the winner.

Counting the $20,000 Citation won yesterday when he ran second to the British-bred Noor in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, the Calumet Farm's ace has poured $899,200 into baking powder manufacturer Wright's pockets. Still ahead are Calumet's twin goals: to pass Stymie's money-winning record of $918,485; and to own the first horse to win more than a million dollars.

Jones may have given a hint after the handicap.

"I'm waiting for the day we can get Citation back on the farm," he said. Few doubt that Wright would like to send the 5-year-old bay to pasture, even temporarily, with his name at the top Weights for the marathon grind will be posted Wednesday. Jones isn't expected to make up his mind until then, if there's an appreciable drop from the 132 pounds Citation carried Saturday, or if Charles S. Howard's Noor picks up 15 pounds or so, railbirds think Jones will send Citation to the post. Otherwise, they're not sure. Noor carried a 110-pound feather Saturday.

Asthma Sufferers Using APS Glycol Vapor

Last September we made a money-back offer so Asthma sufferers could use APS Glyco Vapor for a period of one month for test purposes. A number of Vapor Rolls were delivered on this basis with a very high percentage of satisfied users (over 80%). The results were so much better than we had expected we are again making this unusual offer so additional asthma victims may try APS Glycol Vapor.

The value of "glycolated air" as a method of reducing airborne germs and viruses which cause respiratory illness such as asthma, pneumonia, influenza, etc., has now become widely accepted in schools, hospitals, homes and offices. Actually this simple and harmless way of combating airborne viruses is the result of over ten years of research.

Details of this offer and an informative booklet telling about APS Glycol Vapor and its uses will be sent free to anyone writing for them. Simply send your name and address to Health Equipment & Service Corp., 904 Bonifant Street, Silver Spring, Md., or call SH. 0782. There is no charge. A penny postcard will do.

1950 MERCURY WITH OVERDRIVE AMERICA'S "NO. 1 ECONOMY CAR"!

Sets amazing new gasoline mileage record for gruelling 751 mile Grand Canyon run as it outperforms 30 other entries from America's leading car makers!

YES, now it's officially-proven! Pound for pound, the big new 1950 Mercury IS America's most economical car!

For, in the 751 Mile Mobilgas Grand Canyon Run conducted by the American Automobile Association last week, Mercury delivered grand-prize winning gasoline economy—over a rugged course which ranged from Death Valley to 7000 foot icy mountain passes!

This remarkable economy—made possible by the combination of Mercury's thrifty, V-type, 8-cylinder engine and its gas-saving "Touch-O-Matic" Overdrive—came as no surprise to Mercury owners. For many Mercury owners had repeatedly reported gasoline economy far above average expectations.

Yet this unusual economy is only one of the many reasons why thousands of owners are now choosing Mercury. Many say it's the smartest-looking car on the road. Others claim it's the smoothest-riding, most comfortable, too! And all agree it's the biggest value for the money!

Why not come in and drive this great new Mercury yourself—and see!

Reorganization Plans For Federal Agencies Go to Hill This Week

The first of the President's long-awaited plans to reorganize the Federal Government are slated to be sent to Congress this week. Eight to ten different proposals are reported to have been tentatively agreed to by the Administration.

Cabinet rank for the Federal Security Agency and the transfer of the Maritime Commission's regulatory functions to the Commerce Department are recommended in two of the plans under consideration. The latter would abolish the present 5-man Maritime Commission and replace it with either a three-man or one-man policy-making agency on shipping problems.

Like all reorganization suggestions the Maritime plan is being fought—and hard—by special interests. It's clearly possible that the opposition will delay its being recommended to Congress.

TOP STAFF: Half a dozen or more of the orders are aimed at a realignment of the top management staff in Federal departments. They will have these general objectives:

1. To give the Cabinet heads all legal authority and responsibility for the operations of their departments. Authority now given subordinates by law would be transferred to the Cabinet members who, in turn, could delegate it back to them.

2. To set up assistant secretaries for management in most Government departments—high-ranking jobs to be filled for the most part by career employes.

3. To create additional assistant secretary jobs in the departments of Agriculture, Interior, Commerce, and perhaps others.

Similar reorganizations already have been approved for the State, Post Office and Defense Departments.

ARMY: Meantime, there's a behind-the-scenes controversy over the proposed transfer to the Interior Department of the Army's civil functions of its Engineer Corps.

The Army objects to the move. Its officials argue the transfer would handicap the training of military engineers who, they explain, wouldn't be nearly so effective during wartime without the experience on river and harbor peacetime projects in this country.

On the other hand, the transfer is backed by the Hoover Commission which recommended a merger of the Army Engineer functions with the Reclamation Bureau in the Interior Department.

After a long period of indecision, Interior is now vigorously backing the merger, and its views are said to be indorsed, in part at least, by the Budget Bureau. Competition and overlapping between the two agencies, it's argued, would stop by the proposed consolidation.

The controversy either has, or will, be put up to the President for a decision.

RFC: Its four-year firing program would be at an end if Congress approves its 1951 budget as recommended by the President.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation had 12,200 employes in 1946. On January 1, it was down to 4453. But Comptroller J. W. Considine has informed Congress that the number would increase to 4650 by July 1, and an estimated 4730 by June 30, 1951, if its budget is okayed.

RFC expects to make 8600 loans during the next year compared to 5181 business loans last year. It's requesting 292 additional people—loan examiners, accountants, attorneys, and clerical employes—to handle the larger program. All of the jobs, however, would be filled by employes who were laid off or by those in wartime activities that are being liquidated.

BONDS: Administration witnesses have approved in principle two of the bond bills being studied by the Hoey subcommittee of the Senate Expenditures Committee. They are: (1) the bill by Senator Holland (D., Fla.) to have the Government operate its own surety bond system at no cost to the employes, and (2) a bill by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) to have the bonded employes pay small premiums to a bonded corporation operated by Uncle Sam.

Legion Hit By AVC for Attack on Home Rule

D. C. Area Council Sees Insult to All Citizens in Move To Block Suffrage

The Greater Washington Area Council of the American Veterans Committee took sharp issue yesterday with the District American Legion for "thin rationalization and Iron Curtain-type thinking" in opposing home rule for Washington.

Council Chairman Taft S. Feiman announced that the 11 chapters in the AVC council would meet at the AVC Clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., at 8 p. m. Wednesday to map action against the Legion's stand.

In a letter to all House members Saturday, the District Legion urged representatives who have signed the dischage petition on the Kefauver bill to withdraw their names.

Signed by J. Fred Burns, chairman of the District Department's legislative committee, the letter said home rule would "destroy" the purpose of Washington as a Federal city.

"While section 404 of S.1527 (the Kefauver Bill) grants unto Congress powers irrespective of our District Council, remember those that controlled the police, firemen and health could do untold damage if they should sympathize with nations opposed to our form of Government."

Called Insult

Feiman, replying to the letter, charged that "the Legion has insulted every patriotic and loyal citizen of Washington by its implication that loyal government might fall into hands of forces unfriendly to our type of government.

"Of course," Feiman added, "the Nation's capital belongs to all the people of our Nation. But there is no better medium through which to make it that type of capital than the one of home rule, which would give to Washington . . . a right to vote.

"What the Legion has said is that the present type of community pattern control and taxation without representation . . . is what it favors.

"Fight for Right"

"We will fight for the right of every American," the AVC spokesman said, "to vote, whether his road to the ballot box is barred by poll taxes, intelligence tests, local prejudices, or fear from special interest groups like the Legion.

"Only a little study will show the Legion how closely it parallels thinking of the totalitarian."

AVC's National Planning Committee, in a weekend meeting, granted a charter to a new chapter called the "Home Rule Chapter." The group, dedicated to obtaining home rule, will be initiated at the AVC Clubhouse in ceremonies Friday night.

A resolution defining academic freedom was adopted yesterday at the first congress of the Mason-Dixon Region, National Student Association.

The congress ended a two-day session last night, attended by more than 100 delegates and alternates at the University of Maryland.

The resolution recognized the right of institutions to "set up clearly defined standards in regard to teacher employment" but also "recognizes the right of teachers to freedom from removal from the position in which he has tenure except for clearly shown incompetencies in academic matters as judged by properly constituted authorities."

The resolution further stated that "open advocacy of the overthrow of the Government in the performance of academic duties" would disqualify a teacher.

A further paragraph that stated: "Membership in the Communist Party per se renders a man incompetent to teach" was amended to include members of Fascist or other totalitarian groups opposed to democratic principles."

The group also adopted a resolution condemning "severe injustice in educational opportunity due to the system of separate education for Negro and white students" in this area, and opposing "discriminatory and segregated educational systems."

Miss Gloria Abiouness, regional president, of Dunbarton College, Holy Cross, and past President Michael Rubino of Catholic University, presided at the two-day session.

Colleges represented were Catholic University; Chevy Chase Junior College; Dunbarton, Holy Cross; Georgetown University; Howard University; Johns Hopkins University; Loyola College, Baltimore; Maryland College for Women; Maryland State College; Mount St. Agnes; Notre Dame College of Maryland; St. Mary's Junior College; Towson State Teachers College; Trinity College; University of Baltimore and University of Maryland.

New Play Area for Children Sparked by Southeast Couple

A children's playground—the pet project of a childless couple who have "always liked kids"—began to take shape during the past weekend in an empty lot behind a Southeast apartment development.

The playground, expected to be in operation within two months if all goes well, will be the united effort of residents of the Brandywine-Chesapeake Housing Cooperative, an apartment development between Brandywine and Chesapeake sts. se.

But the idea was that of C. Richard Kiblinger, a Government employe who is now president of the board of directors of the cooperative apartment. More than a year ago, he and Mrs. Kiblinger felt something should be done for the almost 100 children of other residents in the development.

The nearest playground was five blocks away, and what was worse, youngsters going there from the apartment house had to cross two wide highways, South Capitol st. and Nichols ave. sw. Many played in the alleys flanking the project, or in lots where stagnant water collected.

The idea didn't catch on when Kiblinger first proposed it at a stockholders' meeting more than a year ago, and nothing developed until Kiblinger was elected to head the directors last December.

"It was one of the first things I brought up," he said yesterday. The directors agreed to his idea on the condition that the cost could be kept to a minimum.

Kiblinger contacted George A. Hospidor, owner of a piece of undeveloped land consisting of four building lots, behind the apartment houses. Hospidor, a District lawyer who plans eventually to build there, generously offered the use of the lots free of charge, Kiblinger explained.

About two weeks ago, a letter headed "Help Wanted" was slipped under the door of each of the 55 units in the apartment asking if the cooperative could "count on you" for a little work on either last Saturday or Sunday.

The result was an army of some 40 apartment dwellers, who by last night had cleared away the brush, chopped down obstructive trees and raked off the 120- by 120-foot lot.

The men had even begun an effort to fill in a drainage ditch which cuts across the lot by carrying fill in a coaster wagon and a barrel. They hope somehow to obtain the use of a bulldozer to complete this work and to help grade the land. The District government will be asked to make other arrangements for the drainage.

"We'll have to go along bit by bit on the equipment," said Kiblinger, "but it shouldn't be long before the kids have some organized play."

At that time, the women, including Mrs. Kiblinger and Mrs. Edythe Painter, secretary of the directors, will take up their share. They are already working out a schedule under which they will supervise the youngsters at the playground throughout the day.

Other cooperative directors active in the project include Edward Lyons, vice president, Raymond Giesler, treasurer, and Edward Stevens, a member.

Alexandria Woman Hurt In 3-Car Crash

Department Store Cashier Injured In Virginia Accident

A 30-year-old Alexandria woman was injured critically early yesterday in a three-car collision on Route 1, about 5 miles south of Alexandria.

Miss Sherman

Miss Thelma Sherman, a cashier at Jelleff's department store in Shirlington, who lives at 1011 Vernon st., was admitted to Alexandria Hospital about 9:30 a. m. after a car in which she was riding collided headon with another auto which had careened off a third vehicle, Virginia State police reported.

Hospital authorities said she suffered a fractured skull and nose, eye and facial injuries and bruises of both legs.

According to police, she was a passenger in an auto driven by Corpl. Clanton F. Carroll, 32, of Fort Belvoir. Police said the northbound Carroll auto collided with an oncoming car driven by Henry R. Minor, 45, of Antrim, N. H., which careened into the northbound lane after glancing off the rear of a car driven by Dennis M. Wood, jr., of Groveton, Va.

Clark Perkins, 41, of Hillsboro, N. H., a passenger in the Minor auto, was treated at Alexandria Hospital for scalp lacerations and released, police said. A technical charge of reckless driving was placed against Minor, who was released in $250 bond for a hearing March 22 at Fairfax.

Meanwhile, in the District, two persons were slightly injured in separate, early-morning traffic mishaps.

Howard E. Shook, 30, a Capital Transit bus driver, suffered a possible fracture of the left wrist when his bus struck a depression in the street as it came to a stop in front of 1738 Benning rd. ne., police reported.

John Rutley, 45, 1440 Rhode Island ave. nw., suffered back injuries when a taxi in which he was riding stopped abruptly to avoid a collision. James A. Lowery, 25, 668 V st. se., the cab driver, told police he was trying to avoid a speeding auto at Nichols ave. and Chesapeake st. sw. The passenger was admitted to Emergency Hospital, where he was reported in good condition last night.

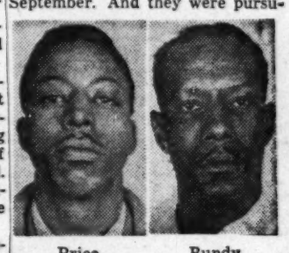
2 Held, Jewels Found in $6900 Holdup of Widow

Round-the-Clock Work Nabs Pair; May Help Solve Gamblers' Robberies

Within 24 hours after it happened, police yesterday "cracked" the $6900 holdup of a gambler's widow here, recovered nearly all of the loot and arrested two men. A third is sought, police said.

At the same time, police indicated that solving the Saturday night robbery has led to identification of one suspect as one of the robbers of a gambler here last September. And they were pursuing leads which they hope will clear up an "unreported" robbery of another gambler.



Price Bundy

Victim in the Saturday night robbery was Mrs. Blance Boldware, 125 R st. ne. She is the widow of William Howard Taft (Sunshine) Boldware, a numbers writer killed in an auto-streetcar crash in May, 1948.

Mrs. Boldware and her sister, Mrs. Lucille Porter, told police they and a woman friend were in the Boldware home at 8:45 p. m. Saturday when three armed men forced their way in. They and a fourth woman who arrived later were herded into a bedroom while the house was ransacked.

Mrs. Boldware told police the three took $40 and jewelry she valued at $6900.

Detective Sergt. Ernest H. Winter, and Detectives Robert J. Reed, Shirley F. O'Neill, and Edward A. Daly of the robbery squad went to work and continued around the clock.

They arrested Ernest Price, jr., 24, of 2800 13th st. nw., a laborer, and Leroy Bundy, 28, of 2238 8th st. nw., who identified himself as a mail carrier. Both men, police said, admitted the robbery. Police said they found three guns in a closet in Price's home.

Yesterday afternoon, police said, Price led Detective O'Neill and Detective Sergt. M. A. Dixon to the home of a friend, who produced a brown envelope containing Mrs. Boldware's jewelry.

Price and Bundy were charged with robbery by force and violence and held under $5000 bond each. Lieut. E. E. Scott, chief of the robbery squad, said both men admitted they have served time before on robbery charges.

He also said that "one of the men" has been identified in the $4200 robbery last September of Roosevelt Spencer, 29, a numbers writer, in his home at 224 F. st. ne.

The "unreported" robbery of Johnny Williams, a known numbers operator, took place the Saturday night before last Christmas in Williams' home at 123 R st. ne., next door to Mrs. Boldware's home. Lieutenant Scott said that the loss was "close to $5000."

Proximity of the Williams and Boldware homes led police yesterday to revive inquiry into the Williams robbery. At least thee other "unreported" robberies of alleged gambling characters have taken place since last fall.

Three robberies which police have knowledge of but "no official reports," are the $17,000 holdup of Robert "Ryebread" Schulman at a floating crap game in the Northeast section late in 1949; the robbery of Emmitt Warring's home, 3900 Massachusetts ave. nw., early in January, in which the loss was estimated from $20,000 to $70,000, and the stickup of Theodore "Little Joe" Scheve in a taxicab January 19. He lost an estimated $2000.

Effective This Year

What Maryland Tax Cut Means to You

The $1,250,000 tax reduction program signed by Maryland Governor Lane Saturday night will mean this to you:

1. Increases to $600 the present $400 dependent's deduction.

Since the Maryland tax is a flat 2 percent, each $100 in deductions from your taxable income means $2 sliced from your tax bill. The $200 increase makes junior worth $12 instead of $8.

A few taxpayers would gain even more.

For example: John Smith's entire $4000 income comes from pensions and annuities. He must pay 5 percent. So his child saved him $20 in taxes (5 percent of $400) under the old law. Under the new plan the child is worth $30 (or 5 percent of $600).

2. Increases the number of taxpayers who are entitled to use the "short form."

At present if you make more than $100 in investment income—or interest on savings, pensions and the like—you must use the "long form" tax return. That means you pay 5 percent on all your investment income and 2 percent on the rest.

The new plan will let you use the short form—and pay 2 percent on the entire figure—if your investment income is no more than $500.

One effect of the change is that if you make $500 investment income, you pay 2 percent, or $10. If you make $501 investment income, you pay 5 percent on it all, or $25.05. That extra dollar income will cost you an extra $15 in taxes.

3. Gives extra relief for the aged.

Right now, you and your wife have a combined personal exemption of $2000 which you subtract from your total income before figuring your tax. Under the new plan, each husband or wife over 65 gets an addition $1000 personal exemption. If you are both over 65, your total personal exemption will be $4000.

A lot of aged persons with small incomes will therefore be tax exempt. Others, making more than $4000, will also benefit.

The same bill, as approved by the Senate, also allows a special $600 deduction for dependents over 65. With the $600 regular deduction for a dependent, that makes a total of $1200 off for a dependent over 65.

Here is how it works: If you are supporting an aged grandmother, she is now worth $8 to you as a dependent. Under the new method, she will be worth 2 percent of her $1200 deduction, or $24.

The tax cuts are due to take effect on returns due April 15.

School Board Attacked by Howard Man

The Board of Education is not making an effort to give Washington Negroes equal facilities in education, Dr. E. O. Knox, professor of education at Howard University, charged yesterday.

Speaking to a "town meeting" at the Commerce Department Auditorium, Dr. Knox asserted that the Board is guilty of a "dual philosophy."

The results of this "dual philosophy," the educator said, is that, from kindergarten on, District Negroes receive a less adequate education than others.

This situation, he said, will continue as long as Washington schools remain segregated.

Other speakers were Herman Edelsberg, director of the Washington office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, who discussed the FEPC bill; Dr. Frank Horn, assistant to the administrator, racial relation service of the House and Home Finance Agency, who discussed housing, and Mrs. Alice Hunter, secretary of the District Board of Recreation, who discussed the board. Moderator was Mrs. Venice Spraggs, Washington correspondent.

The meeting was sponsored by three chapters of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

Informal Fabrics Make Smartest Dress Coats

May I repeat myself? I'll say again that spring 1950 is a season of sharp fashion contrasts. We seem to have two fashions in most everything that are diametrically opposed, each equally important.

Spring coat fashions offer a beautiful example. We hear more about short coats than anything else; yet one of the smartest dress coats of the year is full length, and fitted or belted as well.

These, while very dressy in their soft styling, still maintain a delightfully casual look. This is because the fabrics are often beautiful fine men's wear worsteds,

An 'Occasional Cook' Whose Coffee Tastes 'Terrible' Gets Helpful Advice On How to Brew Palatable Java

DEAR ANNE:

It seems to me I make worse coffee all the time. I use the same brand I always have and, as far as I know, it is fresh, but the coffee often tastes terrible. I am only an occasional cook and would like your suggetions as to the way to make good coffee.

K. P. O.

Fresh coffee of good quality is, of course, the keystone to a really delicious cup of Java. However, there are other points to be remembered:

1. Keep your coffeemaker sparkling clean and scald it before using. 2. Start with fresh, cold water. 3. For each coffee cup, allow one standard coffee measure (or its equivalent, two level measuring tablespoons) of fresh coffee to each three-quarters of a measuring cup of freshly drawn water. 4. Be sure your coffee is the proper grind for your coffeemaker. 5. Your coffeemaker will give best results at full capacity. For small amounts, use a small coffeemaker if possible. 6. After you have found the best timing for your method of coffeemaking, stick to it consistently. 7. Never boil coffee. 8. Serve coffee immediately after brewing—and serve it piping hot.

DEAR ANNE:

Can a mirror be resilvered at home? If so, can you tell me how to go about it?

W. C. T.

This is one enterprising project that shouldn't be attempted by the unskilled. It takes special equipment, and besides, the materials aren't readily obtainable in small quantities. One of the firms listed under "Mirrors" in the yellow pages of the telephone book can do the job for you easily and fairly inexpensively.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me some suggestions as to something out of the ordinary to serve at a buffet supper for 12? Also can you tell me a book I could buy that will give me ideas for future occasions of this kind?

P. R. T.

I can answer this question with the name of a brand new book and by quoting from it. The book is "Cooking for Company," by Ruth Mills Teague (Random House), which will go on sale next week at several local bookshops. This collection of 36 menus for "carefree entertaining" originally appeared in the Ladies Home Journal. (You'll probably remember all the beautiful pictures.)

CLEAN SWEEP: A toe-operated "rug adjuster," which shifts the height of the cleaning nozzle according to the thickness of the rug, is a feature of this 1950 model vacuum.

One supper Mrs. Teague suggests features Indian curry. She calls it "ten-boy curry" because ten different condiments go with it. All you serve with it, besides the condiments are rice and a fruit macedoine dessert.

Indian Curry

(Serves 10 to 12)

Remove all meat from large leg of lamb. Boil bones to make 3 cups broth. Cut meat into half-inch cubes. Mix into it thoroughly 3 teaspoons salt and 12 teaspoons commercial curry powder.

Melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine in skillet, add 8 finely chopped medium onions, and 3 cloves minced garlic. Saute 10 minutes. In another skillet, heat ¼ cup salad oil or other fat. Add meat and let brown.

Put meat and onions in large pot. Add milk from 2 coconuts, 2 cups lamb broth, 1 cup cream or evaporated milk, and 3 teaspoons sugar. Cover and simmer ½ hour. Add 8 peeled, finely chopped apples, 2 cups finely chopped Hubbard squash, a handful of seeded raisins, 8 heaping tablespoons grated coconut and the juice of 1 lemon. Acorn squash or eggplant can be substituted for the Hubbard. Cook gently two more hours, then taste. If desired, add more curry powder.

This is practically a foolproof dish, says Mrs. Teague, and should be made ahead of time (even the day before) as it improves with standing. Reheat over hot water.

Serve with following condiments: 1. Freshly grated coconut; 2. Chopped peanuts; 3. Thinly sliced avocado mixed with crisp bacon crumbles; 4. Chutney; 5. Finely chopped egg white; 6. Hard-cooked egg yolks, pressed through sieve; 7. Green pepper cut in small slivers; 8. Tomatoes cut in small pieces; 9. Chopped chives or scallions; 10. Sliced mushrooms sauteed in butter and minced garlic.

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit direct mail or telephone replies. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Your Figure, Madame

Scales Don't Tell Whole Story

By Ida Jean Kain

PSYCHOLOGISTS promise that three-fourths of success in achieving a definite goal is in knowing you are on the right track. If you have clipped off two or three pounds in the past week, that gives you a firmer grip on will power. Knowing the system works strengthens determination . . . which in turn brings a greater energy release and helps you to continue.

But what about those of you who haven't lost any weight . . . nary so much as a half pound, diet to the contrary? To keep on being enthusiastic about this new way of eating, when nothing happens, is next to impossible. It will help you over the hump to realize that actually you are losing pounds, even though there is nothing to show for it. If the daily calories consumed have been below the number used, then stored calories (fat) have been burned for fuel, for that is nature's law.

Water Retention Slows Weight Loss

THE HITCH is that water may have been replacing fat in the cells, and not until the water balance adjusts will the weight loss show on the scales. To get the picture of this, think of the fat as being stored in tiny cells, each one containing a droplet of fat. As the fat is drawn upon for energy, the droplets in the cells get smaller. But—and here is the explanation for failure to lose on schedule—the fat is replaced with water; and since the stored water in the cell weighs the same as the fat, there is no change in weight although fat has been lost. This condition can continue for as long as 16 days, but it always adjusts in time.

When all the fat in the cell is used, then the water is also released, and presto—suddenly the weight goes down, perhaps as much as five or six pounds or even more. The seemingly sudden loss will amount to all you have actually been losing right along.

While the tendency to store water at the beginning of a diet is not uncommon, it doesn't happen in all cases. Quite the contrary . . . some dieters lose water with fat. When a dieter loses as much as 5 pounds the first week of calories cutting, this is not all fat loss—part of it is water. After the stored water has been lost, the rate of weight loss will be slower . . . it will all be in fat.

Worst of Diet Now Over

BUT whether or not you have lost according to schedule, it will help you to keep on with the new pattern of eating to know that the worst is over. It truly is. The hardest part of diet is packed into the first four or five days, during which time you are shrinking your stomach to more nearly normal size—and the appetite with it—by cutting down on the amount of food with each meal. Naturally, at first the stomach will grumble at reduced rations; but, gradually, smaller meals will be more satisfying. That is why reducing gets easier. It will continue to get easier every week you stay with the new pattern of eating.

West Coast Snowmaker Airs Prowess

California's snowmaker was in town yesterday, with proof that it does pay to prod clouds with dry ice.

Cundiff

He is Stuart Cundiff, civil engineer of Riverside, Calif., who for two years has headed a secret project of egging nature on to fill the catchbasins of water supply for the California Electric Power Co.

To do this, he and his associates not only had to make supercooled clouds give with the flakes but to pinpoint that fall to a mountain area 20 miles long and five miles wide. Most of the time, he admitted yesterday, there was some "slop over" and adjoining areas benefitted—including the catchbasin of a rival electric power producer.

With the relatively inexpensive project requiring one P-38 airplane, a pilot and an assistant, Cundiff said, he was able to add millions of gallons of runoff water last year, enough to produce an extra 1,300,000 kilowatt hours electric output for his company.

It was the first major practical application of seeding clouds for snowfall, though extensive rainmaking tests have been carried out in many parts of United States.

Dry ice grains ranging from rice-size to large marbles were strewn from the plane, depending on atmospheric conditions. The dry ice, at about 5 pounds a mile, generally started snow formation and its chain reaction not only to empty the selected cloud but to draw in other clouds in the valleys below to keep the snowstorm going, Cundiff said.

The manmade snowstorms produced precipitations ranging from .005 to .25 inches.

The power company's seeding operations are carried out between October 15, after the hunters leave the mountains, and May 15, the tapering off time for atmospheric conditions best fitted for snowmaking.

Since his arrival here, the California snowmaker has already been approached by a New York authority for advice on how to aid New York City's dwindling water supply.

Podiatrists Attack 'Fakers' In Treatment of Foot Ills

A comprehensive public-relations program to woo foot sufferers away from chalatans and into the offices of the chiropodists was urged at the closing session of the eleventh annual District Podiatry meeting yesterday.

Dr. Joseph Lelyveld of Rockland, Mass., founder of National Foot Health Week, declared the National Association of Chiropodists "is its own worse enemy by soft-peddling publicity tie-ins with national concerns because they are too commercial."

"We've got to tell our story, and take advantage of any means we can to get word of the foot specialists' work to the public," he said, urging an all-out selling campaign for podiatrists.

Yesterday's program stressed new and better medicinal and mechanical treatment of foot diseases.

Dr. Ben Levy of Schenectady, N. Y., demonstrated a new mould and foot appliance.

Dr. Max Pomerantz of Cleveland, Ohio, spoke on the importance of laboratory data in the diagnosis of foot diseases, and during the afternoon three Washington specialists held a symposium on peripheral vascular diseases.

Dr. A. Owen Penney, past president of the society, also talked on the profession's responsibility in a public-relations program. Dr. M. M. Gottlieb was general chairman of the convention.

Faith in God's Purposes Seen as Best Way to Cope With Fear

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Peter Marshall

THE PROBLEM OF FALLING ROCKS

Driving along the highways that run through the mountain, you may have noticed the frequency of signs that read:

"BEWARE OF FALLING ROCKS."

I have seen them many times and have often wondered why they did not say, "Beware of fallen rocks," for I do not know what one could do about rocks that were in the act of falling as one drove along.

Now this is a hazard of driving along these highways that no precautions can avoid.

Your rate of speed has nothing to do with it . . .
nor the way you handle your car
nor the condition of your tires.

It makes no difference whether you are a good driver or a bad driver, the hazard is there and there is nothing you can do about it.

The question I ask you to consider is what should be our attitude toward these troubles, that we can do nothing to prevent?

The commonest attitude is one of worry, for this is the most common and widespread of the transgressions that mark our inconsistency as Christians.

People have never fully realized just how destructive a thing worry is.

It truly plays havoc with one's life.
It ruins digestion.
It causes stomach ulcers.
It interferes with sound sleep and forces us to face another day unrested and irritable.

It shortens our tempers and makes us snap at the members of our family.

Anxiety and tension, which are twins, bring on heart disease

Jesus had a lot to say about this very thing.

In the sixth chapter of Matthew's Gospel, you will find quite a full quotation on this theme in the Sermon on the Mount.

Jesus said: . . . "take no thought for the morrow"—that is, no anxious, troubled thought—

Or we might well say, "Don't worry about tomorrow"—for that is precisely the meaning of His words.

Can you, by worrying, keep something unpleasant from happening?
Do you soften the blow ease the burden or lessen the pain?

Of course not, but you stand a good chance of reducing your ability to take it.

I want to make a distinction between thoughtful consideration on the one hand, and the useless fretting on the other that destroys peace of mind takes away appetite
and leaves a person sleepless and miserable.

With regard to the rocks that may fall upon us, and in these days of the atom bomb, they are heavy and sinister, the only happy way to deal with them is the way of faith—faith in the purposes of God faith in the presence of God faith in the promises of God faith in the power of God to deliver us in any trouble.

Only when we have faith can we be free from fear.

If you are afraid, then we must suspect that you have no faith in God.

We have to learn to cooperate with the inevitable.

We'd better.

There are so many things in life beyond our control that he is wise who recognizes the fact and who says:
"God willing, I will do this or that . . ."

This is not mock piety, but clear recognition of life's contingencies, and our helplessness in certain situations.

The rocks will fall.

We don't know when, and we cannot find out for sure.

Worrying about it, fearing it, does not help.

Life must go on, and so must we.

But we can go on without strain.

One of the things Christ definitely promised us was trouble.

"In the world ye shall have tribulation," He said.

But we must never forget that He added:

"But be of good cheer" . . . or in other words,

"Cheer up" . . . "I have overcome the world."

Now, when trouble comes, when the rocks do fall, it will not help to reject faith altogether, and fling away in revolt from all that you once believed.

If Christ is right, then there is a loving purpose in it all . . . even though our tear-filled eyes cannot see it.

If Christ has not lied to us, then there is a reason behind even the darkest providence.

There must be a reason, for God rules;

And the reason must be good, for God is good.

The promises of the Scriptures are not mere pious hopes or sanctified guesses.

They are true.

There is no perhaps about them.

How does the prophet know that God will neither leave us nor forsake us?

How does the psalmist know that the broken-hearted and the afflicted will be comforted?

Because they themselves had dark days and lonely nights.

That's why!

Because they themselves had gone through it.

Christ does not leave us comfortless, but we have to be in dire need of comfort to know the truth of his promise.

It is in times of bereavement that one begins to understand the meaning of immortality.

You think today, as the sun streams in golden shafts through the window and birds sing of spring, you think that you believe it.

But wait until you stand at the edge of an open grave . . .

Then you will know what it means to believe it.

You will not then be interested in chattering about immortality . . .
or gossiping about the theories of the hereafter . . .

You will know . . .

Deep down in your own heart, you will know.

We have such pagan ideas about death—most of us—not at all Christian or in keeping with the revelation we have in the Scriptures.

We are wrong, who haunt the cemetery, as if to feel the presence of loved ones who are not there, if Christ has told us the truth!

We have our eyes wrongly focused.

We do not understand.

Our tears are selfish, for we are self-centered—self-absorbed.

We keep thinking of what it means to us.

We reflect how much we miss the departed, and we weep, because we begrudge their going.

We wish they had stayed on with us awhile . . .

We wish things had gone on as they were.

We resent the change, somehow, never thinking what it must mean to them that are gone.

In the New Testament, we hear little of the families with that aching gap, very few pictures of mourners huddled together sitting silently in their homes . . . weeping . . .

No, but you do hear a great deal about the Father's house of many mansions . . . and the angels.

Let us therefore act like believers, live like Christians so that we can die like Christians . . .

That is the true Christian attitude.

Those we love are with the Lord, we believe, and the Lord has promised to be with us, never to leave us nor forsake us:
"Behold I am with you always."

Well, if they are with Him,
they cannot be far away.

It is not true to sing—or even think—of Heaven as being far away.

It is no distant land
no alien shore
but near us—very close.

It gets nearer as we grow older, as more and more of our friends and loved ones go home, our thoughts and expectations turn ahead to the time when we shall all meet again in the new life . . .
in the other room
never again to part.

I Need You Near Me

By James J. Metcalfe

When you are near and I may see . . . the softness of your eyes . . . There are no shadows on the ground . . . Or any lonely skies . . . For I am happy in my heart . . . Each moment of the day . . . And I am blest and comforted . . . By every word you say . . . I am encouraged to succeed . . . In everything I do . . . And I am grateful to my God . . . That I may be with you . . . But every time you leave me and . . . We have to be apart . . . There is an empty feeling in . . . The center of my heart . . . And all I do is wonder then . . . How long the time will be . . . Until the shadows disappear . . . And you come back to me.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

With This Kind of Guy, You Can't Win

Harry Traub reminds us of the technique of the inveterate borrower who asks: "Are you going to be using your typewriter today?"

When the answer is: "Why, yes—in fact I'm going to be typing practically all day long," the sponger slyly comes back with:

"Oh, fine—then you won't mind lending me your tennis racket."

ADD SIMILES

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., suggests: "As anguished as the cry emitted by a female who discovers she has a run in her stocking."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

As one of your West Virginia subscribers, I'd like to ask a favor of you.

I have composed a little message to John L. Lewis, and would appreciate your delivering it to him, in person.

Inasmuch as I am a member of Mr. Lewis' union, it would be just as well if you let me remain anonymous. This is my message:

I mine coal or I don't, at your beck and nod,
For to you I am just a pawn;
You affect all the airs of a demi-god,
But you look like a demi-John.

Name withheld.

Dear Sir:

I'm not quite brave enough to hand it to him personally, so if it's all the same to you, I'll drop it in the mailbox and run like the dickens.

Bill.

COMFORT vs. APPEARANCE

My search for a laundry that knows the meaning of "No Starch" brings a varied response.

Naomi Wood of 7410 Piney Branch rd., Takoma Park, Md., explains that even if a laundry does try to keep the starch out of your shirts, modern methods make it all but impossible. She says:

"They press the shirt by laying it on a padded surface across which millions of starched shirts have passed. Your shirt gets starched right there."

Harold V. Semling, jr., of 1423 Sheridan st. nw. reports that the Dupont Laundry knows the meaning of the words "No Starch," and always follows instructions.

Harry B. Creely of 1900 F st. nw. adds that a Chinese laundry at 5112 MacArthur blvd. nw also omits starch for those who request it. (My directory shows a Frank Lee Laundry at 5110. I guess that's the one he means.)

A subscriber who prefers to remain anonymous writes:

"My trouble is not with my laundry, but with my wife. I can't convince her that comfort is just as important as appearance. My neck feels like I've been wearing a tin collar."

S. N. Bandel of 200 Massachusetts ave. nw. also had his troubles with laundries. As he puts it:

"I changed laundries a half-dozen times. Each time I would fasten to the front buttons of the shirt a little cardboard note bearing the message: 'No Starch, Please.'

"Back would come the shirts, stiff as boards with my little cards still fastened to the front.

"But I finally found a laundry that follows instructions. It's the New System, at 300 Missouri ave. nw."

"Try Prosperity Cleaners at 3546 E. Capitol st.," suggests a Greenway resident. "Ask for a guy named Dave. Very obliging—he'll wash 'em by hand if necessary."

This is all very well, but I am currently a bit perplexed by a letter from the American Institute of Laundering. It cites some surprising statistics about starch. For example:

Eighty-three percent of the Nation's males like their shirts either wholly or partially starched.

Twenty-seven percent want starch in the whole shirt.

Thirty-three percent want starch only in the collar and cuffs.

Smaller minorities want starch only in the collar, only in the cuffs, or only in the shirt fronts.

Fifteen percent want no starch at all.

And 2 percent don't give a hang, one way or the other. They're probably Jerry Klutts disciples, and favor polo shirts for all seasons except when it's snowing.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Enlighten U. S., Acheson Urged

(Editors' Note: Drew Pearson's column today takes the form of a letter to Secretary of State Dean Acheson on the all-important question of peace in the atomic-hydrogen race with Russia.)

By Drew Pearson

Washington.

Honorable Dean Acheson,
Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Dean:

I have been thinking of you a great deal lately—thinking of the very unfair criticism heaped upon you and thinking also of the carefree days when you and I used to ride together and talk rather banteringly of the "career boys" and their mismanagement of world affairs.

Pearson

Now you are in a position where you can influence those affairs more than any other man in the western world, at a time when the world needs leadership more than ever before, and at a time when it sometimes seems the best things in life are about to come crashing down around our ears, while most of us stand petrified, powerless to act.

I have been thinking what I would do if I were in your place. Frankly, I don't know. I am a reporter and you are Secretary of State. I have never been celebrated for my modesty or my reluctance to tell other people how they should run the Government.

But I do not know what I should do were I in your shoes.

If you called a conference to discuss an atomic-hydrogen agreement, it is a foregone conclusion it would fail. The Kremlin being what it is, you can't win.

And if you call such a conference, it will be interpreted as a sign of weakness, a diplomatic surrender.

Door-Pushing Russia

I remember that, about four years ago, when you were still Undersecretary of State, you told a friend that Russia was like a thief going down the street trying every door latch to see which one it could open.

Most people wouldn't have believed you at that time. They were so anxious to get along with Russia. But you were right. Russia is going down the highways and byways of the world pushing at every door. If she can't get into Berlin thanks to the Berlin blockade, she pushes into China. And after that she tries to latch keys of Burma, Indo-China and the Philippines.

So I can understand and heartily agree with your recent statement that the only thing to the world Russia understands today is force.

However, if you and the Nation whose foreign affairs you guide do not take some step toward a discussion of the world's mad drift toward war, we are likely to be branded as warmongers and potential aggressors. And in this day of phychological cold warfare, when the twisted mouthings of Moscow can do much damage, it is important that we do not put ourselves on this spot.

Leadership Wanted

The American people, though confused, disappointed and frustrated, are the most intelligent in the world. Frequently they are ahead of their Government, ahead of their newspapers, ahead of those who profess to lead them.

Today we are in a new world of atomic weapons and jet-propelled speed planes, and the American people realize that we cannot still apply horse-and-buggy politics. If our weapons are atomic, then our politics must be atomic also.

All this, I say, the American people generally understand. But they do not always understand silence on the part of their leaders. They do not understand an abrupt press handout on the momentous question of making the hydrogen bomb with no appeal to the rest of the world for regulation and cooperation.

And they do not understand wisecracks or cuss words in connection with foreign policy. Even if the facts are not pleasant they want a solemn diagnosis of what they face. They can, if absolutely necessary, bear more sacrifices, but they do not want to be kept in the dark. They want to know.

Therefore if you could give them a series of broadcasts outlining what is ahead, it not only would be universally welcomed but might prove a turning point in the molding of our foreign affairs.
